

IF NOISE PENETRATES into the home from neighboring units, fabric on walls and wall-to-wall carpeting topped with an area rug are effective in reducing irritating sounds.

Space needed for plants to grow

"Mighty oaks from little acorns grow" is an old aphorism relevant to foundation planting. Small plants that fit their location perfectly when first planted often turn into "monsters" that defeat the very purpose for which they were planted. And with the wrong plants, this can happen in a surprisingly short time.

The sketches graphically illustrate what can happen in a matter of 10 years when the wrong plants are used. The top sketch shows a foundation planting that harmonizes well with the architecture of the house; most of the house is revealed, and windows receive maximum light.

THE BOTTOM SKETCH shows the same planting gone completely out of control. A large part of the house is covered by planting which has grown so tall that the lower-level windows only receive half the available light. Plants, instead of complementing the house, now dominate it.

George Creed

It's your landscape

These before and after sketches emphasize the importance of planning your foundation planting carefully. For most modern homes, slow-growing tall plants in combination with low-growing ones are best. Fast-growing plants get out of hand too quickly, requiring either frequent pruning or replacement.

Some good plants to use include: Green Lustre Holly, Heller's Japanese Holly, Improved Inkberry, Sargent Juniper, Blue Rug Juniper, Drooping Leucothoe, Cranberry Cotoneaster, Spreading English Yew, Dwarf Japanese Yew and low-growing types of rhododendrons and azaleas.

WHAT CAN YOU DO if your planting looks like the bottom sketch? If the plants are worth saving at all, cut them. But before starting on a massive pruning project, be sure you know what you're doing. Get a handbook on pruning and study it. A little time spent reading will pay big dividends in the end.

Improper pruning can spoil a salvageable plant and, often times, will kill it. And when you start pruning, don't do it all at once. Reduce your plants to acceptable sizes by systematically cutting them back over several years.

Q. Does severe pruning benefit roses?

A. No. When pruning roses, remove all dead wood and shorten very long stems, but don't remove any more live wood than is necessary.

Q. What is a good fertilizer for gladioli?

A. A 4-10-5 commercial fertilizer.

Noise in homes menacing

by BARBARA LADD

Most apartment dwellers know the irritation of stereos blaring from the next unit, and people with homes are aware of the hum of lawn mowers or power saws throughout the neighborhood.

While it may seem that the only recourse is to tolerate irritations, the Federal government is showing some concern about the magnifying problem of home noise and urges consumers to take steps to control it.

Federal noise laws govern industries under the Occupational Safety and Health Act. Currently, no laws or regulations affect homes, despite a report last year by the National Safety Council indicating that noise in homes has reached menacing levels.

THE COUNCIL POINTS to the nearly 20 million Americans who already suffer from total or partial hearing loss as the main reason to tackle the problem harmful levels of noise in the homes and apartments. But the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) reported in 1973 that constant exposure to noise also results in a variety of psychological effects, including irritability, lack of concentration and dissatisfaction.

In its report, the EPA stated "there is a trend toward using lightweight construction materials that have relatively poor sound-insulating properties," as a way of cutting construction costs.

Besides construction, there has been a trend toward more noise-producing appliances like garbage disposals, dishwashers and electric can openers, according to the report.

"Noise can be a problem in homes and apartments, especially for people who have children," said Valoie Wawak, a Rolling Meadows interior designer and owner of Valoie Interiors. "But there are a few things people can do to try to cut down on unwanted noise."

ONE TRICK MANY restaurants use is carpeting, not just on the floor, but on the walls or ceilings.

"Generally, people think they can put carpeting only on the walls in recreation rooms," commented Jane Hasler, interior designer with Peterson Interiors, Arlington Heights. "But carpeting is the most effective soundproofing method to use and designers have been aware of its sound-proofing qualities for quite some time."

Composition-type sound-proofers are another possibility for the walls and ceilings, said Ms. Wawak.

"Cork paneling is a simple way to cut back on noise from adjacent apartment units," she said. "And don't overlook the value of heavy draperies."

Some designers recommend hanging draperies even along windowless walls, to insulate against unwanted noises.

"Fabrics of any type help absorb noise," said Ms. Hasler. "Woven blind fabrics applied to walls offer some noise proofing."

THE NATIONAL BUREAU of Standards, in a 155 page handbook, offers other suggestions for cutting down on noise in homes and apartments.

The handbook recommends installing desk telephones instead of wall styles, so the noise of the ring won't be readily heard in other rooms or adjacent apartment units. If a wall

Trips spotlight plants

My dream machine is the American Horticultural Society (AHS). It might well also be yours, if you glory in plants and travel.

Membership in the AHS allows the luxury of fantasizing an adventure to an exotic spot where beautiful flowers are the main attraction.

Anyone at all interested in plants can be part of the society. You don't have to be Luther Burbank, Professor Botany or the grande dame of the North Shore. Membership costs less than a fill-up of gas (for my car anyway), and brings with it a host of goodies.

I'm not "selling" memberships in the society. I mention the American Horticultural Society only because I'm afraid some garden buff out there might be missing something.

THIS WEEK, FOR instance, the mailman delivered the lure of two separate, fascinating trips, and the opportunity to participate in the society's annual Seed Distribution Program. The program allows members to receive rare, free seeds just in time for spring planting.

Seeds on the master list from which members may choose (collected by Morton Arboretum in Lisle) include: bird of paradise, sundrops, five-spot, baby blue eyes, flowering flax (related to the plant that produces linen), Peruvian lily and farewell-to-spring. There is a choice of unusual vegetables like bok toy, upland cress, banana muskmelon, Chinese rose radish and others; shrubs such as coontie and Chinese beauty berry. For the very patient gardeners, even trees, like cork tree, Japanese raisin tree and Korean evodia are offered.

A COLORFUL magazine put out by the society comes bimonthly. It's called "American Horticulturist" and includes articles on a myriad garden-related topics. In the past AHS has held plant auctions and other activities, but what really got me going this week was the brochure on spring horticultural explorations of Scandinavia and a summer adventure to England and Wales.

Personally, going to see England's Kew Gardens has been a repressed desire of mine for at least six years. This particular trip leaves Aug. 7 and takes in Kew, Savill Gardens at Windsor Great Park (a woodland garden on the grandest possible scale), the Shropshire Flower Show (one of the major summer exhibitions in England), Ness Botanical Gardens, the old walled city of York, and Fountains Gardens (with its 17th and 18th century landscaping). The tour will stay at fabulous places until Aug. 23 for (Dare I tell you?) about $1,500.

THIS SPRING, on May 31 and at a higher cost, a 747 whisks lucky gardeners to Brussels overnight and then jets on to Copenhagen to a moated castle, Tivoli Gardens (a center of culture, art, and good food for some 100 years). A ferry takes the group to

Mary B. Good

Potting shed

Sweden to visit a count and his castle gardens and the royal summer residence of the late Swedish king. Then it's on to Oslo to see the fjords, Viking ships and Vigeland sculpture park. The itinerary goes on and on.

There is always a next time and another adventure waiting for you as soon as your oil well starts producing, your inheritance comes in, or you decide to blow the money you saved for a new car on a trip and drive the old junkheap another two years.

BUT YOU SEE, even if you can't go, what a way to while away a rainy afternoon reading about such delights! I throw a log on the fire, curl up in my ratty Queen Anne's chair with the arm binding falling off, and forget about the bleak scene outside my window while basking in the beauty of my fantasy.

Dreams are what make life endurable. Without them how dreary our workaday routine might be! The address of the American Horticultural Society is Mount Vernon, Va. 22121.

Home borrows from old and new

The term transitional has been given to the type of residential architecture which spans the gap from traditional to contemporary. It reflects the forward step a large section of the home-buying public has been willing to take toward extreme contemporary. Transitional, then, has become the choice of a majority.

An interior detail borrowed from the traditional era is the window seat in the living room. Pleasant informality and warm comfort is, for some reason, associated with it. The one in this plan is 11 feet long, providing plenty of space for several little ones to crouch and watch Daddy come home on a cold evening (that is, if you have little ones!).

Jean-Paul Saint-Michel

Home of your own

ALSO BORROWED from the contemporary is the living storage wall in the family room. Many of today's family activities take place in what is now known as the "family room." A two-foot deep and 10-foot long storage wall such as this one can store all the paraphernalia required for such activities.

This particular storage wall is divided into four main sections, any part of which may be opened by itself. Bifold doors are used so that no large open door is an obstacle. At normal desk height, two slide-out desk tops provide space. There are bookshelves, magazine storage space, a place for art supplies, game slots, desk drawers, and you name it, it's there.

THE DINING ROOM leads directly from the 18 foot by 12 foot living room. There is easy access to the kitchen/family room which make up the rear section of the house.

The single-car garage has been provided with a cabinet and a large storage area. Access to the garage is through the laundry.

Designers aim at comfort

It's positively encouraging to see how designers have tuned into our body needs in the area of sitting, stretching and snuggling!

Applause to Elroy Edson, ASID, of Selig Manufacturing Co., Inc. In a way he has mastered the science of human behaviorism, applying personal observation and life patterns to home furnishing

IN HIS LATEST variation on a continuing theme, Edson delivers an almost perfect piece of gamesmanship with Selig's "Playpen" concept.

By manipulating four basic forms, Edson makes the Playpen components work for the smaller spaces most of us have to deal with. Three gently curved no-arm units and one ottoman nest together to form an island that really supports two bodies in comfort.

ONE ANSWER to big-comfort, small-space needs is this 66-inch square island, a variation on Selig's Playpen theme, a game they've been mastering for over five years.

Truth is, most three-seat sofas accommodate only two persons in seating comfort. How often will three individuals settle down shoulder-to-shoulder with two other bodies? Rarely, in our observation.

In this instance, the same two would be able to experience leg-up comfort, and one or two youngsters could jump in for family togetherness. Or with the flip of an ottoman, one person could enjoy a sit-up, leg-down posture while another could stretch.

THE BONUS is that the four pieces require only a 66-inch square of space when bundled.

Edson's and Selig's thinking may cause us to revitalize our own approach to furniture placement. We might skip the inevitable coffeetable, sidetable formula, and switch to sofa back tables, mobile carts and etageres.

In the example illustrated today, the fabric is an attractive geometric print that offers a textural impression rather than one of a big, bold print.

There's definitely a human, person-touching-person possibility here. But the desire for solo comfort and quiet hours of luxury is also satisfied.

Weddings

Christine Fredricks—John Bieruta

A Des Plaines couple, Christine Fredricks and John J. Bieruta, were married March 12 in Trinity Lutheran Church but are temporarily separated while the bridegroom seeks living quarters for them in Great Falls, Mont.

John is stationed there with the U. S. Air Force. Christine is remaining on her job with Allstate Insurance Co., Northbrook, in the meantime.

Parents of the bridal pair are Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth J. Fredricks, Des Plaines, and Mrs. Jean Bieruta of Chicago.

Both Christine and John graduated from Des Plaines high schools, she from Maine West and he from Maine North.

THEY EXCHANGED vows and rings in a 5:30 p.m. ceremony and then greeted 50 guests at a reception at Little Villa Banquet Room. The newlyweds had a week's honeymoon at Lake Lawn, Delavan, Wis., before John left for Montana.

He and his bride had just one attendant each for the church nuptials. Christine's sister, Mrs. Sharon Holthouse of Des Plaines, was her matron of honor. Corey DeMatteis, Des Plaines, served as best man.

The bride chose an ivory chiffon gown appliqued with Chantilly lace and a matching lace cap with a fingertip veil. Her bouquet was of cymbidiums, stephanotis and baby's breath.

The matron of honor wore a light blue dress with matching jacket and carried blue-tipped gladioli in her bouquet.

Mr. and Mrs. John J. Bieruta

Arlington Heights residents Mr. and Mrs. Edwin B. Robertson traveled to Lexington, Ala., for the March 12 wedding of their son, Edwin Jr., to Sheila Lynn Danley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene C. Danley of Lexington.

Both Sheila and Edwin are employed by the Tennessee Valley Authority in Chattanooga, Tenn.

Their double-ring ceremony took place by candlelight at 2 p.m. in Nebo

Presbyterian Church. The bride wore a full-length white gown of voile over taffeta, and an organza picture hat secured her tiered veil of illusion. She carried a bouquet of daisies and baby's breath.

THE BRIDE'S sister, Mrs. Rhonda Steen of Lexington, served as matron of honor. She was attired in a pink gown complemented by a miniature bouquet of daisies.

Edwin chose Ralph Brown of Florence, Ala., as his best man and the bride's brother Carl of Lexington and Dave Dedrick of Knoxville, Tenn., as ushers. A reception in the church followed the ceremony.

The newlyweds are now at home in Chattanooga, following their honeymoon in Gatlinburg. Edwin holds a bachelor of science degree in biology from Murray State University in Kentucky. He attended graduate school at the University of Tennessee.

The doctor says

Humans don't need extra vitamin E

A large number of my friends are taking vitamin E. They claim it slows the physical aging process. I have read that excess vitamin E will raise the blood pressure and that anyone with a tendency toward high blood pressure should not take E. Any comments?

I doubt taking vitamin E will do anything but lighten your wallet.

There are studies that show some animals lived longer when given vitamin E than matched controls not receiving vitamin E. There is also some work on cell cultures indicating vitamin E fed to cells prolongs cell life.

Neither of these experiments can be applied to normal man. Why? Because our metabolic system is different from rats and other animals. Remember we belong to the small group of animals that cannot make vitamin C from any carbohydrate source. We can't digest cellulose either. We are different.

As a result we have no clinical picture of any disability caused by vitamin E deficiency. By contrast if you don't get vitamin C, you get scurvy. Deficiency of vitamin D causes rickets and so on for all other vitamins essential to our own metabolic system. While we need vitamin C and most animals don't, it is true we don't need additional vitamin E and many animals do.

SO A PROLONGATION of lifespan in animals with vitamin E isn't going to tell us much about its use in man. Cell cultures are artificial environments, quite different from our normal body and such studies have limited applications. A good scientist does not make the mistake of applying such observations in special situations to man and life as a whole. He limits his conclusions to the established facts.

Vitamin E is widespread in our normal foods. Anyone eating a half-way balanced diet will have plenty of vitamin E for whatever purpose it serves. Additional amounts will not improve health. It will not prevent heart attacks or enable you to live longer. Things are not that simple.

On the other hand I don't think a reasonable amount of vitamin E added to your daily routine will cause high blood pressure or hurt your health. Won't do you any good, won't do you any harm.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-12 to give you more complete information on how vitamin E works. Others who want this information can send 50 cents for it with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Just write to me in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

I am worried about how contagious emphysema is. Doctors say I have symptoms of emphysema. I am 84 years old and have a tired-out feeling.

If it is contagious, will it affect friends who stop in to see me?

Stop worrying. Emphysema itself is not contagious. If you had tuberculosis with emphysema, the tuberculosis might be, but that is not the case or your doctor would have told you so and treated you differently.

Emphysema is a condition involving the inability of the lungs to empty out the old air. The lack of oxygen exchange decreases the available energy. It is not contagious and I hope you continue to have your friends stop in so you can enjoy them.

Pigeon unwelcome as roof dwellers

Dear Dorothy: We have a problem with pigeons. Our house is built so there is an overlapping of the roof in front — which makes a perfect nesting place for them. Is there anything we can put on the roof to give them the "hot foot" or otherwise keep them away? If so, where can we purchase it?—Joyce Iseler

Over the years readers have sent in various methods to handle the problem of starlings and pigeons. Stuffed owls, stuffed parrots and artificial snakes stuffed with mothballs apparently have worked for some. Many people swear by the windmill whirrigigs which scare away birds. Several have reported stringing cord across the area with aluminum strips swaying in the breeze, and some have used the same cord idea with foil dishes that clank against each other when there is any breeze. Hope one works for you.

It's getting to be that time of year when itinerants will come knocking at your door with the usual line, "Just happen to be doing a job in the neighborhood. We'll be glad to spray your shrubbery at a bargain price." Or the other gimmick, "We've been doing driveways on the next block. You've got a lot of cracks in yours and we'll do it at a cut price." Don't fall for any of that rubbish. They're ripoff artists. Reliable outfits don't do business that way.

Dear Dorothy: Hope this will help the reader who wanted to change the color of her white refrigerator. Ten years ago, when we lived in Chicago, we wanted to make our white refrigerator yellow. We contacted a body shop where they sprayed cars. They sprayed our refrigerator "Cadillac yellow." It's been great and still looks as if it had just been done. Hope this helps.—Mike McLeod

Dear Dorothy: Finally had to get a new stove and bought one with a continuous oven. I do not find it absolutely satisfactory and yet notice all the labels of various cleaners saying, "Do not use on continuous cleaning ovens." What does everyone else do?—Jean N.

Nothing. The cleaning process goes on by itself — or should. One owner of this type of oven wrote to say she finally used baking soda on a damp sponge and wiped the oven very carefully; that it came out sparkly clean. However, I wouldn't do it unless it said so in the manufacturer's instructions. Otherwise, you have no recourse if something goes wrong.

Dear Dorothy: How does one paint louver?—Jocelyn Darden
With a great deal of trouble. Anyone who can afford it should have this job done professionally. But if one is determined to do it, use a spray — and do a very light mist first. Allow this to set and then apply a final spray to cover completely.

Summer study awards to 3

Three high school students have been named recipients of scholarships for summer study programs, offered by Elk Grove Junior Woman's Club.

Charlene Eick, a Conant High sophomore, will spend a week at Allerton Federation Art School near the University of Illinois, Urbana.

Michelle Savino, a sophomore at Elk Grove High, will attend a two-week speech communication workshop at Eastern Illinois University. She is a member of the high school debate team.

THE THIRD scholarship winner is Don Soutar, an Elk Grove High sophomore, who will spend two weeks at Illinois Wesleyan University Summer Music Camp. Don is in the high school marching, symphonic and lab jazz bands.

The Elk Grove Juniors, organized in 1957, schedule several fund-raisers each year to maintain their community service projects and scholarship fund.

The club recently initiated new members Debbie Giorno, Nan Fricke, Carol Major, Joyce Plotter, Millier Tasch, Donna Vilser, Nancy Willis and Tasch, Donna Vilser, Nancy Willis and Sharon Wingler.

Saccharin ban is unexpected boon for date sugar magnate

by CLARENCE ZAITZ

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Jeanne Jones suddenly finds "the whole world is my market" for date sugar, a product she began marketing last November as a sugar substitute for diabetics.

"Suddenly I find I'm in a whole different ballgame," she said in her hill-top Spanish-style home in nearby La Jolla, "I'm filling the needs of the whole world."

Orders for her date sugar began escalating within days of the federal ban on saccharin as a sweetener.

MRS. JONES, an author and lecturer on nutrition, is a diabetic herself. She frankly says she is hopeful she'll soon get competition "to put date sugar on the grocers' shelves."

Her interest in sugar substitutes began in 1968 when Mrs. Jones learned she had diabetes. She vowed then: "I wouldn't give up all those good gourmet foods."

Since 1972 she has written three cookbooks. Distribution of the third, "The Fabulous Fiber Cookbook," has just begun.

"To me, gourmet cooking came first. The recipe modifications came afterward."

"MY WHOLE philosophy is on diet and life-style. You can entertain, and you can entertain elegantly, using foods that are good for you."

When she began researching ancient sweetening methods, she learned the Phoenicians had used date sugar.

"It's really not a sugar at all," she said, "although it looks like and tastes very much like brown sugar. It is made from dried dates, finely ground to the consistency of coarse sugar."

She went out to buy five pounds of date sugar and "I brought it home and started playing with it. I experimented to find what it would or would not do in recipes."

ASSURING HERSELF that this was the ideal sweetener to use in cooking and baking, Mrs. Jones began seeking a source. She made arrangements to buy the entire crop of a date grower in California's Coachella Valley for processing into date sugar.

"I feel like I've reinvented the wheel," she said. "It's nothing new, it just fell into disuse."

"It's high in potassium, fairly high in fiber, has fewer calories than sugar and is visually quite beautiful."

It has at least one limitation: it cannot be used as a beverage sweetener.

"Date sugar won't dissolve in hot water. It won't dissolve in hot anything."

Date sugar is still secondary to her writing-lecturing career, Mrs. Jones said, but each day's mail delivery is threatening to change those priorities.

Carter can't stop flow of red ink

NEW YORK—Don't look now, but President Carter's promise to balance the federal budget by 1981 is in danger of melting faster than the snows of winter.

The President keeps telling us he intends to keep all of his promises, which fortunately is impossible. Even Amy's daddy is not really capable of simultaneously balancing the budget, "stimulating" the economy and enacting the expansive 1976 Democratic party platform.

In the real world, he is going to have to pick and choose, like other mortals, and there are some of us who were hoping that in his heart the budget would turn out to have the priority.

We have, you see, already tried just about everything else except balancing the budget, and the results have scarcely been worthy of installation in the Economic Hall of Fame. Indeed, in recent years, we have managed to wreck a substantial portion of what had been a healthy, growing economy and we have done so with a self-destructive skill seldom matched this side of the British Isles.

THE ROLE OF the budget in all this is hard to deny, unless you make the common error of listening to the rhetoric instead of looking at the deeds. Balancing the federal budget gets a terrific amount of looking at the deeds. Balancing the federal budget gets a terrific amount of attention at election time — so much so that some inattentive people labor under the misapprehension that we have, in fact, frequently accomplished this feat, to no avail.

Irresponsible critics have misnamed budget balancing "that old-time religion;" if it is that, then it has been even less practiced than most other creeds.

Consider this; in the past 24 years, encompassing the Eisenhower, Kennedy, Johnson, Nixon and Ford administrations, the country was assailed with pledges (at least quadrennially) to get Uncle Sam out of the red. The reality, however, was that once the speech-making was done the country produced only four surpluses (totaling a bare $10 billion) against 20 years of deficits (totaling $325 billion).

There's nothing partisan about this. Richard Nixon talked confidently about "balancing the federal budget so we can all balance out family budgets;" in his five years more red ink flowed than in the previous two dozen. And Gerald Ford, despite his media reputation as a conservative, presided over two years that, all by themselves, out-scarleted Nixon's five.

BUT JUST LOOK what's happening now: President Ford submitted as one of his final acts in office a budget for the next fiscal year that would have included still another huge deficit, $47 billion. "Ouch!" you might say — if you weren't a politician. The politicians took one look and cried "Piker!"

The new President cheerfully tackled more than $10 billion onto Ford's deficit before you could say "fiscal flintheart," meanwhile nicely diverting the public's attention by spotlighting some trifling reductions in the White House's TV-set inventory and the Cabinet's limousine services.

Well, Congress wasn't going to let any newcomer from Georgia make it look like a sluggard. The chairman of the house budget committee let it be known he thought even Carter's elevated request was some $5 billion below what the government could be spending next year if it really put its mind to it.

Let any voter regard them as pen-

Business briefs

Carter urges use of minority banks

President Carter told federal departments and agencies Friday to put their money in minority-operated banks. In a one-page memorandum, Carter put his own approval on the government's minority bank deposit program. He said that when it began in 1970, there were $3.7 million in government-controlled funds on deposit in 31 banks. The amount has grown to $86.6 million, and the Treasury Dept. has set a goal of $100 million by the end of 1977. "Minority banks have helped themselves by aggressive marketing and providing efficient, competitive services, and participating federal departments and agencies have reinforced these efforts," Carter said. As of Feb. 23, the government had $15.9 billion of its cash in banks. However, $12.2 billion was in the 12 Federal Reserve banks and another $2.4 billion in so-called tax and loan accounts. Purchasers of government securities, not the government, decide which banks will hold the tax and loan accounts.

Proxmire raps energy plan

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., said Friday the inclusion of the Federal Power Commission in President Carter's proposed Energy Dept. would lead to far higher gas and electricity rates. Proxmire said the FPC, an independent regulatory commission, "should not become the legal and administrative handmaiden of a new Dept. of Energy formed to aid, advocate and abet the energy industry, as President Carter has proposed." "Placing the federal Power Commission under the policy umbrella of the new cabinet level department can only result in far higher gas and electricity rates for all Americans," Proxmire said. He said the administration has "made no bones" that President Carter will call for higher natural gas prices to promote conservation and stimulate production.

'Ugandans smuggling coffee'

Ugandans are smuggling coffee out of that country disguised as dead bodies, Brig. Ali Fadul, Uganda's director of provincial administration, charged Friday. Ali said mourning parties were crossing into neighboring Kenya with coffins purportedly containing dead bodies but actually packed with "loads of illicit coffee." Radio Uganda said he told a group of leading Ugandan coffee officials, "all necessary steps are being taken to stamp out" this and other forms of coffee smuggling. Every funeral party presumable will be closely examined. Uganda has been losing hundreds of thousands of dollars in revenue because of a huge coffee smuggling racket into Kenya, sparked when Uganda's internal transportation system virtually collapsed. The government has promised severe measures against anyone caught smuggling coffee.

Counterculture lures Moonies

There have been — and will continue to be — a spate of court cases involving charges of brainwashing and counter-brainwashing by religious sects such as the Unification Church and the Hare Krishna movement and “deprogrammers” seeking to break the adherence of members to the sects.

Nevertheless, very little has been done to measure objectively or report either the attraction of the sects or attitude changes members undergo when they convert to such groups.

However, Stillson Judah, emeritus professor of the history of religion at the Graduate Theological Union and Pacific School of Religion, Berkeley, Calif., has tried to fill in the sociological blanks.

JUDAH'S CONCLUSION: Converts to the Moon sect are young people who once were identified with the counterculture of the 1960s but now are moving to the more conservative views of the “establishment” at the same time that the “establishment” is

by IRA MILLER

AUGUSTA, Ga. (UPI) — For most players, leading a golf tournament is exactly what they're supposed to do, but for Tom Watson, the Masters' co-leader after two rounds, it has become a cruel nightmare.

Watson took a share of the 36-hole lead with journeyman Rod Funseth Friday by putting together a 3-under-par round of 69, and once again he had to face the question that has haunted his brief professional career: Do you choke?

"We all choke," Watson responded, matter-of-factly, but deep down, he knew that did not answer the question.

"I THINK there's a difference between choking and not believing in your swing," he went on. "But what it is, I don't know."

The question has plagued Watson ever since he threw away the U.S. Open championship both in 1974 and 1975, the first year by shooting a horrendous 79 in the last round after leading, the second by playing the last 36 holes in 155 after playing the first 36 in 135. He has won a British Open (1975) and four tournaments on the U.S. tour, including twice this year when he's the leading money winner, but he also has thrown away two more tournaments in the last round this year and that's what people remember.

Tom Watson

"It's mental. I just didn't have a swing that held up. When you believe in your golf swing, when you're swinging well, you don't choke as badly. But when you're swinging badly..." Watson trailed off.

THE FINAL two rounds of the Masters, the tradition-heavy spring inaugural that begins the four-event chase in golf's Grand Slam, perhaps will provide Watson with his strongest test as a leader.

Watson and Funseth, whose 67 Friday matched the day's lowest round, are at 139, five under par for two trips around the 7,030 yards of shrubberylined fairways that make up the famed Augusta National Golf Club.

There are 23 players within five strokes of them, and among them are five-time winner Jack Nicklaus, two-time winner Gary Player, four-time runnerup Tom Weiskopf and Ben Crenshaw.

CRENSHAW, the runnerup here a year ago, and 24-year-old Bill Kratzer share third place at 140 following Friday rounds of 69 and 71, respectively.

At 141 are Player, first round leader Hubert Green and Australian Bob Shearer. Player, winless in this country since 1974, a year in which he won both the Masters and British Open, shot 70 Friday; Green had 71 including a double-bogey 5 at the 155-yard 12th hole where he blasted out of a sand trap into the water; and Shearer shot 67.

Four more players are at 142, two under par, including Nicklaus, who shot 70 and was far from pleased.

"I felt like I've played well enough to be several under par," said Nicklaus, who has had problems with a balky putter. "I had an opportunity to be well into the lead and I haven't taken advantage of it."

ALSO IN THE group at 142 are Jerry Pate, the 23-year-old U.S. Open champion Australian David Graham and veteran Mac McLendon.

Ray Floyd, the defending champion, headed a group of seven players at 143 by matching par 72 Friday. The others are Gene Littler, Dave Hill, Tom Kite, who bogeyed three of the last five holes, Rik Massengale, Jim Colbert and Mark Hayes, winner of the Tournament Players Championship.

And at 144 lurks such talents as Weiskopf and Hale Irwin, the 1974 U.S. Open champion, plus Bruce Devlin, Billy Casper, Andy Bean, Bruce Lietzke and Lee Elder. Elder, the only black ever to play in the Masters, shot 68 Friday to easily survive the 36-hole cut. In 1975, when he broke the color barrier in this tournament, Elder shot 74-78 and went home.

WATSON HAD five birdies and two bogeys in his round Friday and, like Funseth, used just 28 putts on the slower-than-usual Augusta National greens.

MASTERS SEARCH. B.R. "Mac" McLendon looks for his ball in the water on the 13 hole at the Masters. McLendon had a hot game on the front nine with a 32 but a string of bogeys on the back nine. He's three shots behind.

Bulls give record crowd 113-109 win over Houston

by KEITH REINHARD

The playoff-bound Bulls strutted their stuff in front of a rocking record Stadium crowd Friday night, charging past the Houston Rockets for the first time this season, 113-109.

The largest crowd ever to see a Chicago Bulls game — 21,652 — roared their approval as Mickey Johnson and Scott May helped break open a tight contest in the third period.

The impressive Chicago triumph was matched by a Detroit victory and aims the Bulls toward a likely collision with Portland in the first round of the playoffs next week. The Bulls end the regular season Sunday in Buffalo.

"IT WAS A BIG win for us," beamed Chicago coach Ed Badger afterwards. "Houston has many good shooters and they came to play tonight. Obviously, we showed them that we aren't about to coast either — even though our playoff spot was already assured."

May poured in 22 points while cracking the Bull rookie single season scoring record and Johnson accounted for 27 points. May collected a dozen of his points in the third quarter after the two teams had left the floor at halftime in a 51-51 deadlock.

The game was also tied at 57 when the Bulls broke loose. Norm Van Lier drove to the bucket and fed out to May for two. Then May and Wilbur Holland teamed on a fast break and moments later, Van Lier stole the ball and Johnson slammed dunked for a six-point lead.

The Bulls led by as many as 10 and closed out the third period ahead, 81-74.

HOUSTON MADE A couple of runs at the Bulls in the final quarter. First the Rockets closed a 91-82 gap to seven (100-93) and then in the very late stages, they trimmed a 109-96 deficit to 109-105 with less than one minute to go.

Johnson responded with an 18-footer and another big dunk play to ice the verdict.

Badger noted that he had put Artis Gilmore on teenage sensation Moses Malone and assigned Johnson to defense Kevin Kunnert when he was in the pivot. Badger credited those matchups with helping the cause.

"Moses has really come on strong lately," Badger said. "I thought Artis did a great job on him and he still scored and boarded a ton."

MALONE, WHO'S ONLY averaging 13 per game, connected for 25 points and snared 20 rebounds. Calvin Murphy had 22 points and Rudy Tomjanovich 21 for the Rockets.

May shattered a 10-year-old rookie scoring record previously held by Erwin Mueller at 1,015. May entered the contest with 1,012.

"May was playing more relaxed tonight because he got the record early," Badger said. "His moves were smoother because he was looser."

Turning his attention to the upcoming playoffs, Badger noted, "I don't like the idea of a 2-out-of-3 playoff because there's no margin for error."

"EITHER PORTLAND or Golden State will try to run on us. I just hope it doesn't get too physical, because we're not a physical ball club. We rely on quickness."

The standing-room-only mob at the Stadium Friday was the 12th sellout of the season for the Bulls in Chicago and pads the already-established all-time season attendance record.

LOOK OUT BELOW. The Bulls' Scott May reaches for the basketball while teammate Artis Gilmore positions under the hoop in action Friday night at the Stadium. May had 22 points and Gilmore 19 in the Bulls' 113-109 victory.

Major effort for Hoffman's vaulter

by ART MUGALIAN
Track and Field Editor

A Major development is going up in Hoffman Estates and it isn't another high-rise. Not in the usual sense, anyway.

The development is Paul Major, Hoffman High's senior pole vaulter who is building onto the Hawks' already prestigious vaulting reputation with a notoriety of his own.

IN HIS FIRST outdoor action of the season, Major broke the Hoffman pole vault record by soaring to 14-8 in a dual meet against Conant. The old Hawk mark was 14-4, set by Dave Paape last year. Paape, now at Northern Illinois University, placed third in the state meet last season with a 14-3 effort.

Major's previous best was 13-6, which he had reached as a junior taking third in the Mid-Suburban outdoor. He also hit 13-6 early in the 1977 indoor season, but Major sat out the MSL indoor championships for disciplinary reasons.

"Pole vaulting is a funny event," said Hoffman head track coach Jim

Swift, who was a middle distance runner in his scholastic days. "I don't know what Paul is capable of — I just hope he can go 14-8 again."

Swift quickly pointed to the coaching of his assistant, Bill Spiletto, "Bill is the one who gets all the credit for Paul Major," said Swift. "I'm just glad Paul's vaulting for Hoffman Estates."

MAJOR'S VAULT puts him in second place on the all-time list of vaulters. Only Schaumburg's Bruce Mahlig, who cleared 15-7 in the 1975 outdoor championships, has done better.

Hoffman discus thrower Joe Bartow set another school record by tossing 137-8 Thursday, but Conant won the meet led by Dan Cummings' victories in the mile and two-mile.

The top discus throw on the first big day of outdoor action came from Forest View senior Lonnie Reitz, who muscled the plate 163-2 against Elk Grove. Reitz, the MSL's runnerup outdoors last season, surpassed his personal record by 15 feet.

Elk Grove topped the defending MSL champion Falcons 76-50 behind the strong running of senior Pat O'Brien. One of the league's top hurdlers, O'Brien won the 120-highs in 14.8 and came back in the 330-lows to win in 41.8. His top times were in the sprints, however.

O'BRIEN RATTLED off a wind-aided 10.0 in the 100-dash and capped his day with a victory in the 220 in 22.7.

Rolling Meadows' win over Schaumburg featured a 10.1 performance in the 100 by Mustang Dave Boursaw who beat Saxon sprinters Jeff Ways (10.3) and Pat Youngs (10.4).

Ways returned to beat Meadows' Pete Till in the 440 as Ways ran a 51.0 to Till's 52.2.

Rick Sutton of the Mustangs didn't run because of an injury and Schaumburg's Mike Christy pulled up lame in the 440-relay, which was won by Schaumburg in 45.7.

BUFFALO GROVE surprised Palatine 56-38 in a triangular that was won by Evanston with 84 points. Top marks for the Bison came from discus thrower Dave Kellogg (152-3), miler Joe Schmidt (4:29.8), two-miler Joe Shields (9:52), and low hurdler Chris Hilvert (40.6). Shotputter John MacIsaac reached a personal best of 51½ and pole vaulter Glenn Evans went higher than he'd ever gone, 13-0.

Palatine's Tom Johnson ran the area's first sub-2:00 half-mile outdoors with a 1:59.9, edging Schmidt who ran 2:00.7. The Pirates also got a 50.6 in the 440 from soph Dave Kennedy, who was beaten by Evanston's Barnes (50.4) and a 6-2 victory from Tom Digan in the high jump.

Hersey's nonconference loss to Glenbrook North was highlighted by a pair of victories for Joe Velicek in the 100 (10.2) and the 220 (23.3). Huskie hurdler Mike Nirva won the highs (15.8) and the lows (43.0).

Fremd whipped Arlington 98-39 as Viking triple jumper Dave Smedley leaped 44-8 and junior two-miler Dan Inbody outdueled Arlington's Doug Austen, winning in 9:39.4. Austen ran 9:42. Fremd high hurdler Gary Gunderson won in 14.8.

Arlington got a double victory from Jay Lenahan in the shot (51-0) and the discus (136-4) and a win from pole vaulter Dave Jauch (13-0).

Sports world

DETROIT'S Howard Porter (54) and Leon Douglas try to stop Philadelphia's Doug Collins (20) as he goes up for a shot during action Friday night. Collins managed to avoid the block for two points in game won by Detroit, 116-112.

'Ball Four' Bouton signs Sox contract

Jim Bouton, who shook up the sports world with a best-seller on his experiences in baseball, has been signed by the Chicago White Sox to a contract with their Knoxville club in the Southern League, the Sox announced Friday.

Bouton, 38, joined the White Sox in spring training this year on a trial basis.

A one-time 21-game winner with the New York Yankees, Bouton authored "Ball Four," which related personal stories about big-name players in the major leagues and aroused a storm of reaction from players prominently mentioned in the book.

Bouton, a pitcher when he was not writing, played his last full year in the major leagues in 1970 with the Houston Astros.

He returned to baseball in 1976 and for the final weeks of the season with Portland, Ore., where he started six games, completed five and posted a 4-2 record.

Bouton broke in with the Yankees and won 21 games for them in 1963.

He worked several years as a sportscaster in New York after leaving Houston.

Hudson rolls to top-seeded spot

SPRINGFIELD, Va. — Tommy Hudson of Akron, Ohio, won seven of eight games and averaged 214 in the last round of match play Friday night to become the top-seeded bowler in today's final of the $75,000 Fair Lanes Open.

Hudson, shooting for his second win on the Professional Bowlers Assn. tour this year, stood in ninth place when the final round began. He finished with an over-all match play record of 14-10 and a 42-game pinfall of 9,590.

This year's third leading money leader, Hudson won the $80,000 Monroe Matic Open last month in Windsor Locks, Conn.

Don Bell of Santa Maria, Calif., bowled a 300 in his final game to jump from eighth to third and qualified for the five-man finals with a total pinfall of 9,476.

Louis Moore of Columbus, Ohio, was second-seeded while Ernie Schlegel, who lists his home town as the U.S.A., was fourth-seeded and Cliff McNealy of San Lorenzo, Calif., was fifth-seeded.

Twins' Bostock refuses to sign

OAKLAND — Outfielder Lyman Bostock, the American League's fourth best hitter last season, Friday said he has ended contract negotiations with the Minnesota Twins and will play out his option.

"Regardless of what they offer after today, I am not going to sign with the Twins," said Bostock, who hit .323 in his first full season in the majors last year. "I set an expiration date (Friday) and they failed to settle. Their last offer wasn't even close."

Abdul Jalil, who represents Bostock through Super Star Management, said the Twins' final offer called for a two-year package which he said was "not worth considering."

"We were looking for a four-year deal with fairly good increases — an average of 18 per cent over the last three years of the contract," Jalil said. "We feel the contract offered would not be a fair compensation of a player of Lyman's caliber."

Naber swims to backstroke record

CANTON, Ohio — John Naber, the University of Southern California's king of swimming, won the 100-yard backstroke in American record time Friday night to highlight the AAU National Championships, claiming the 15th AAU backstroke title of his career.

Naber sliced .05 seconds off his own record with a time of :49.31 to win his second event of the meet, with fellow Olympian Linda Jezek and Tracy Caulkins also claiming their second titles.

"Since it was my last backstroke event, I wanted to swim a race I could really be proud of," Naber declared, "a good time, but not an extremely low time."

"I'm not trying to be immortal. But this is a big nervous let-down — very little else matters the rest of the meet. I'm past history," he declared.

'Catfish' hurt, will miss start

NEW YORK — Pitcher Jim "Catfish" Hunter suffered a bad bruise on the instep of his left foot when struck by a line drive off the bat of Milwaukee's Von Joshua Thursday and will miss his next start, the New York Yankees reported Friday.

Hunter, who pitched seven scoreless innings in the Yankees' 3-0 opening day triumph, had X-rays taken of the injury Friday and they proved negative. However, team physician Dr. Maurice Cowen said Hunter would probably have to rest a week before resuming his pitching duties.

The injury occurred in the sixth inning when Joshua, who had three hits, slammed a hard one-hopper off Hunter's foot and was thrown out by shortstop Bucky Dent.

Marcia Dolan tops amateur event

PINEHURST, N.C. — Marcia Dolan of Danbury, Conn., fought back from an early two-hole deficit Friday and easily captured the 75th annual women's North and South amateur golf championship.

She defeated Dianne Dailey of Winston-Salem 5 and 4 over the 5,900-yard No. 2 course at Pinehurst Country Club, playing at par 74 for the tournament.

Dolan, who failed to survive the second round in four previous tries to win the tournament, was just one over par in the 14-hole match. Dailey was nine over.

Reds, Astros record wins

From Herald Wire Services

Cincinnati's Reds made it look easy, as they usually do, but Houston needed 11 innings Friday night to pull out a tense win over Atlanta in major league baseball.

Joe Morgan blasted a three-run homer and knocked in four runs in the Reds' 6-3 victory over the San Diego Padres.

Joe Ferguson, playing in his first game for the Astros, lined a leadoff home run in the 11th to give Houston a 3-2 win over the Braves in the only other game on an abbreviated schedule.

California and Seattle hooked up in a late American League game on the West Coast.

IN THE Reds' victory Morgan's blast, coming in the fifth inning after Pete Rose reached on a fielder's choice and Ken Griffey singled, was one of only six hits the Reds collected off three Padres pitchers.

Jack Billingham and Dale Murray limited the Padres to nine hits as the Reds, shooting for their third straight world championship, boosted their record to 2-0 on the year.

With loser Brent Strom walking the first three batters he faced, the Reds scored two runs in the first inning without a basehit.

The Reds boosted their lead to 5-0 with Morgan's homer and added a final run in the seventh inning when Rose doubled for his first hit of the season, took third on an infield out and scored on Morgan's sacrifice fly.

Billingham, after giving up one run in the seventh, departed in the eighth when Gene Tenace homered after Dave Winfield singled. Murray blanked the Padres the final 1-3 innings to preserve the victory.

IN HOUSTON, Braves' reliever Bob Johnson, making a baseball comeback after a one-year retirement, took the loss when Ferguson blasted his second pitch of the inning for a homer.

Astros' relief pitcher Ken Forsch recorded the victory by allowing one hit in two innings. Astros' ace J.R. Richard and the Braves' Andy Messersmith each pitched nine innings. Richard allowed seven hits, while Messersmith gave up six hits. Each struck out seven.

Houston tied the score 2-2 when Willie Crawford doubled in the sixth, driving in Bob Watson from first base. Watson had reached base on a fielder's choice following a walk by Jose Cruz.

Atlanta's Jeff Burroughs, playing in his first National League game, slammed a two-out, two-run homer in the first inning.

Houston scored once in the bottom of the first on Julio Gonzalez's single, Enos Cabell's single and a sacrifice fly by Cruz.

The attendance of 25,781 was the largest Houston season opener in the Astrodome since 1967.

HOUSTON ASTROS shortstop Roger Metzger (14) leaps over Atlanta's Rod Gilbreath to make the double play throw to first. Houston won in 11 innings, 3-2.

Father phones, player obeys, Hawks go home

by MARTIN LADER

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (UPI) — On Thursday mornings, Clark Gillies received a phone call from his father, Don, in Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan.

"He congratulated me on my birthday," recalled the young captain of the New York Islanders. "Then he told me to get off my butt and score the winning goal."

As simple as that, Gillies obeyed his father and did as he was told, celebrating his 23rd birthday in fine fashion before 15,317 paying guests. His goal late in the second period turned out to be the winner as the Islanders edged the Chicago Black Hawks 2-1 to complete a two-game sweep of their NHL Preliminary Round Stanley Cup play-off series.

THIS SET up a repeat of last year's quarter — final series against the Buffalo Sabres, who wound up their first-round series with a 7-1 rout of Minnesota. Last season, Buffalo won the first two games against New York before the Islanders struck back with four consecutive victories.

The series gets underway Monday night in the Nassau Coliseum.

Chicago was supposed to be the home team for the second game of the best-of-three set, but was locked out of its own stadium by a previously booked rock group. Thus there was the unusual circumstance of the Black Hawks wearing their white home uniforms and getting all the privileges of a home team — except for the support of the fans.

"I liked beating them in their building," joked Islander defenseman Denis Potvin.

JUST AS they did in the series opener Tuesday, the Black Hawks jumped off to an early lead as Dennis Hull sent home a 20-foot rebound during a power play at 11:12 of the opening period. But that was the only shot that eluded New York goaltender Billy Smith.

Jude Drouin got that one back for the Islanders a little less than three minutes later, sending a bullet shot over the shoulder of Tony Esposito from the left faceoff circle.

Then came Gillies' birthday present at 14:18 of the second period. Billy Harris set up the play by picking up a loose puck near center ice and skating down the right side. As he hit the faceoff circle, Harris dropped a pass behind him to Gillies, whose drive went into the net off the arm of Esposito.

"I was yelling at him (Harris) ahead of me," said Gillies. "He pulled the defenseman away and I had a lot of room to shoot. I didn't even get it where I wanted it. I got it under his (Esposito's) arm and luckily it got through."

STAN MIKITA hit the post before Gillies' goal but the Black Hawks didn't even come close to getting the equalizer in the final period, managing only four shots on goal to 16 by New York.

"We've had a problem all year with not enough shots on goal," said Chicago Coach Bill White. "You can only do so much with what you have."

Esposito, who won rave reviews from the Islanders for his play in the two games, was subdued in the dressing room.

"We are one goal apart, really, so you try for a break," he said. "You keep working. If we were lucky on our chances, the pressure would have been on them. I don't really think they're much better than us."

Chicago defenseman Randy Holt suffered a severely lacerated right ear when he was apparently hit by a stick late in the second period and he required 18 stitches.

DROP IN THE BUCKET. Thousands of fingerling rainbow trout were released into Axehead and Belleau lakes Wednesday. The lakes were closed for three days to permit the trout to become familiar with their new surroundings, but re-opened today at sunrise.

Fresh fish in an Easter Basket?

Angler's spring has sprung

Nature has designed many cues for proclaiming the arrival of spring. One of the most eagerly awaited signs, though, is actually a departure — the melting of ice and temperatures mild enough to wet that first fishing line of the year.

Beginning today, spring has officially arrived in the minds of area fishermen for the following reasons.

- The anticipated warmup should encourage spawning smelt to move toward shore and into angler's nets along Lake Michigan.
- Cook County Forest Preserve lakes, including Axehead and Belleau in Des Plaines, have received a fresh supply of rainbow trout and re-opened at daybreak today.
- Crappies, walleyes and northern pike are exploding in Wisconsin waters.

The unpredictable smelt season hasn't even begun to ripple fishermen's nets along the lakefront, prompting some anglers to guess that perhaps the run has already occurred.

But the delay appears to be only temporary. Water temperature is finally over the 40-degree mark and promised warm, gusty winds can only help to expedite the heating process and attract the tasty morsels along the breakwater.

When the smelt do arrive in their staggering numbers, anglers will be filling five-gallon buckets in an hour or two.

SELECTED FOREST preserve ponds were reloaded with trout fingerlings Wednesday and should provide hot action for shore fishermen. Although small, the kids have a ball with the rainbows and the atmosphere and conditions are ideal for teaching youngsters the fundamentals of casting.

The limit of trout is five, any size, but don't be lulled to sleep by nibbles by the young rainbows. A 4½-pound trout was taken at Belleau Lake and reports of 14-16-inch rainbows are common.

The word from southern Wisconsin is that walleyes and crappies are on the move. But stealing the big headlines was a 27-pound, 7-ounce channel catfish taken at Yellowstone Lake in Lafayette County. The cat was taken by an 82-year-old woman using a worm for bait and on 10-pound test line.

In the southeast portion of the state, nice catches of crappie have been reported on Lauderdale and Whitewater lakes in Walworth County, Waubesa and Wind lakes and the Fox River at Burlington in Racine County, Pewaukee and Nagawicka lakes in Waukesha County and Elizabeth and Marie lakes in Kenosha County. Crappie and northern are also being taken below the Wilmot dam in Kenosha County.

BEST BAITS are spoons such as Dardevles and similar artificial lures. In the Madison area, bluegills and crappie are being taken off Hog Island on Lake Waubesa. They're being caught in 15 feet of water, four feet from the surface on wax worms.

Limits of small male walleyes are still being taken on the Wisconsin and Wolf rivers with hotspots including Orihula, Fremont and Guths Landing at New London on the Wolf and below the Sauk-Prairie and Wisconsin Dells dams on the Wisconsin.

Organize clean up projects

The Dept. of Conservation will provide help to groups planning clean up projects during or near Clean Streams Week, which has been designated by Gov. James Thompson for May 14th-22nd, Director David Kenney has announced.

"Stream clean up projects can help make streamsides more aesthetically pleasing and also improve fish and wildlife habitat and water quality," Dr. Kenney said. "The Department is fully supporting clean up efforts throughout the state."

Department of Conservation fisheries biologists will be available to suggest streams or stream segments which need attention and to advise groups regarding appropriate landfill sites where trash collected during the clean up effort could be deposited. In addition, Department trucks will be available in some areas to help transport trash to landfills.

"EARLY ORGANIZATION is the key to a successful clean up project," Dr. Kenney said. "We urge interested persons and groups to contact the Department staff soon so planning efforts can begin."

Persons seeking advice on matters such as streams in need of cleaning up may call the regional biologist in the Department's offices in Regions I, II, IV, or V.

To check on the availability of trucks for trash disposal, contact the regional land manager at any of the Department's five regional offices. Locations of regional offices and their phone numbers are:

Region I — Rock Falls — 815-625-2968; Region II — Spring Grove — 815-675-2355; Region III — Champaign — 217-356-9392; Region IV — Alton — 2968; Region V — Spring Grove — 618-435-8138.

Begin construction of fishing museum

by JIM COOK
Outdoor Editor

The Arlington Heights fishing museum is on the way, according to representatives from the American Fishing and Tackle Manufacturers Assn. (AFTMA). The organization has selected April 29 for groundbreaking.

Richard J. Kotis, president of AFTMA, will officiate at the groundbreaking ceremonies from 3-3:45 p.m. April 29 and extends an open invitation to the public.

The $1 million project was scheduled for construction early this spring, but because of the worst winter in the nation's history, the groundbreaking ceremonies were delayed.

Situated on a tract of land at the northeast corner of the Northwest Tollway and Arlington Heights Rd. between Algonquin and the toll road, the project is scheduled to be completed Oct. 1, 1977.

AFTMA EXECUTIVE Vice President Thomas R. Schedler said work on the museum would now proceed with "redoubled effort" to meet the target date.

The AFTMA center will offer greatly expanded products and consumer education programs that will certainly appeal to the entire fishing community.

Schedler said the projected completion date of the "functional nerve center" would have a three fold effect on the fishing tackle industry and sportfishing.

He explained that the new facility would provide a statistical focal point for industry-wide action programs, serve as a problem-solving clearinghouse for the fishing industry and for sportfishing and assistant governmental agencies in solving business and environmental problems.

"WHETHER research involves business trends or marine biology, our new AFTMA Center will enable us to isolate issues, analyze market forces and encourages appropriate remedial action," Schedler said.

Schedler explained the new approach such a facility would offer. "Our new library alone will save members, professional researchers, educators and students countless hours of random effort."

In addition to the library and extensive education and research facilities, the AFTMA Center will also feature a one-acre pond for developing instructional programs and an international museum designed with historical achievements in sportfishing.

Many yarns have been spun about the elusive fish that broke so many lines and got away with so many lures in his mouth that when he shook his head, it sounded like Old St. Nick.

They all came true for 13-year-old Jeff Luse. Jeff landed an 8-pound pink salmon fishing the mouth of the Bus-kin River in his home town of Kodiak, Alaska.

The salmon had nine lures in its mouth — 5 Nebco Pixees, 3 Dardevles and one Bolo. Jeff was using a Pixee at the time he caught this swimming tackle box. He gave the fish to friends and kept the assorted lures for future trips.

A dream come true!

Track program at Rockford East is not quite dead

Chuck Wallin used to be the cross-country coach at Rockford East High School.

The emphasis, of course, is on "used to be."

When the Rockford voters and their school board decided last year to cut off sports funding for the five city high schools, Wallin was left clinging to his job as science teacher.

"I was worried about losing my job when they were talking about laying off 1,000 teachers," said Wallin. "They said they were going to drop everyone up to seven years' teaching. That's about 1,000 of the 1,700 teachers."

AFTER THE pieces were picked up and the bitterness and recriminations subsided, life at Rockford East returned to normal. Without any sports.

Now, the "coach" and his athletes are outcasts, stealing time and borrowing facilities, looking for places to run and begging for invitations to "open" meets.

It's incredible that they run at all. The once-mighty Rockford East track program has been reduced to a handful of runners, including the two-mile relay team that finished third in Illinois last season in a time of 7:33.9.

"We have the third-best relay team in the world last year," said Wallin, ruing the fact, not extolling it. "Not the third-best in the nation — the third-best in the world. We had that entire team back this year."

WALLIN MEETS his runners after school and "practice" begins.

"The kids can't take showers at the school, they can't even go in the gym," the coach said. "Sometimes we run on the road, sometimes the park, the golf course, and sometimes the track. There's no fence around the track or else I'm sure they would lock us out."

Byline report

Art Mugalian

Wallin's cross-country team that finished third in the state two years ago is a shell of what it once was. "We were rated No. 1 this season," said Wallin. But there was no season for East.

"The main thing now is getting competition for the kids," is the coach said. "We're trying to make the best of the situation, trying to keep them running. I really think they would add to a meet, not take away from it."

THE EAST runners are limited to open meets in which they can compete unattached. Even if they were to meet eligibility requirements, the track might be prohibited by the Rockford school board from competing in a sanctioned IHSA event.

"With the stand the board of education made, it's just simply a case of they don't want to bring sports back," Wallin said. "Oh, parents say, 'hey, here's the money, go ahead,' but the administration says 'absolutely not.'"

"They don't want to make any exceptions in any sports so we can't participate in any high school meets."

The University of Chicago Track Club has invited the Rockford runners to compete in its weekly open meets, and Wallin hopes to be able to accept the invitation.

"WE MIGHT ALSO be running down at Champaign the 23rd of April — just the relay team," Wallin added. "We were able to find some cross-country and indoor track meets we could run in, but it's a little tougher outdoors. The competition is pretty much closed to us."

Wallin isn't optimistic about the chances for a return to sports in Rockford and he makes no bones about the years ahead.

"They say the kids are still surviving, but that's it, they're surviving," the coach said. "I'll say this — the kids who don't graduate from East this year won't be back next year. They'll transfer. I've talked to every kid to encourage them to leave."

"If their families have to trade houses or if they have to live with their grandparents, they should get out for their own good," he said.

"Quality people are leaving the area — not just in athletics but the academics too."

"I really like the staff I work with here and I like the athletes I work with," added Wallin. "But if I have a chance to advance myself professionally, I'll leave East."

AS LONG AS his athletes show a dedication to running, Wallin will hang in there.

"These are highly motivated athletes that are left," said the coach. "They have goals they want to accomplish and that's the main thing that's kept them going — that and the camaraderie that's developed by going through this ordeal."

"I'm hoping things work out for the kids. I've got two seniors — from the relay team — with a good chance for scholarships. We have to think about the future. I don't like to dwell on the past. If something develops here things could be different, but I wouldn't bet on it."

"It's a long, long shot."

'Round the World Crafts

In Yugoslavia children like to make these pretty Easter eggs. With an adult's help, you can make some, too. Hardboil an egg. Then put paraffin or old white candles in a tin can. Set in a pan of water and heat on the stove until the wax is melted. Lower the egg into the hot wax with a bent wire. Put on waxed paper to dry. Draw designs in the wax with a round toothpick. Make lines wide. Dye in red egg dye mixed with a little vinegar. When dye dries, hold the egg under hot water. Wipe off the soft wax with a paper towel. Shine the egg with a few drops of cooking oil.

Self-blocker unblocked

South's opening notrump is in line with modern practice in spite of the worthless doubleton. Not that all players follow this modern practice, but in any event the bid is a reasonable one. North might well have doubled the two-spade overall, but decided that since his opponents were not vulnerable the set would not be worthwhile. West opened the king of spades. A quick count showed South had nine tricks made up of five diamonds, three side aces and a king. A slightly slower count showed the possibility that all four diamonds would be held in one hand against him. In that event, there would be no way to get five diamonds. Further analysis showed that the diamond suit might be called a self-blocker in event of a 3-1 break. The ace, king and queen would have to be played first and the 9, 8 or 6 would shut out North's two small. Then, South found a way to guard against this. He ducked the first and second spades, discarded a diamond on the third one and had unblocked the suit. New: paper Enterprise Assn.

Ask Andy

Jellyfish float through life in earth's seas

Andy sends the Encyclopaedia Britannica's 1977 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Dee Dee Hicks, 15, of Gallup, N.M., for her question: WHAT IS A JELLYFISH? Jellyfish are from a group of animals called coelenterates. That's the fancy, scientific name to describe a group of creatures who have bodies made of only two layers — an outer surface called ectoderm and an inner called endoderm. A jellylike substance between the two layers gives the creature form and its name.

Jellyfish are not made out of jelly, as you have probably guessed, nor are they fish. They are simple, transparent sea animals that vary in size from an inch to more than 10 feet in length.

Jellyfish do not have backbones or skeletons. Their soft bodies are often shaped like umbrellas. Around their outer edges are stinging tentacles that are used for getting food. Swimmers in the ocean sometimes have received severe stings from certain kinds of jellyfish.

The stinging cells of the jellyfish are called nematocysts. They can paralyze small organisms, which the tentacles then bring into the jellyfish through a center opening.

Jellyfish propel themselves by squirting jets of water from their central openings while contracting their bulk. Water is expelled downward and the animal moves upward.

Also located around the rim of the creature are a number of sense organs, some of which act as simple eyes and some as organs of balance.

Jellyfish are sometimes called medusae because their fringe of tentacles looks very much like the snaky tresses of Medusa, a monster from Greek mythology. On the jellyfish which measures 10 feet across, his tentacles can be as much as 100 feet long and the big monster can weigh as much as several tons.

One type of jellyfish is called the Portuguese man-of-war. He's found in the North American Gulf Stream and is iridescent in many beautiful colors. He is balloonlike since he floats on top of the water and trails his long threadlike tentacles behind him.

A close relative to the medusae are the comb jellies. They have eight rows of comblike swimming plates arranged along the body from the mouth to the opposite end. It is by these plates that comb jellies swim and maintain an upright position. When stimulated, the comb jellies carry out a chemical reaction within themselves that produces a brilliant cold light.

Andy sends a Student Globe to Jimmie Watson, 12, of Coquitlam, B.C., Canada, for his question:

HOW DOES THE SEA GULL SOAR? Gulls, with 43 species in the family, can be found along almost all the world's coastlines. He's a most remarkable flyer and by body build and instinct has an ability to glide and soar that appears to be almost effortless. He can soar along on air currents just above the water with very little movement from the wide spread of his wings. Often a large group of gulls spread out over a wide area of sea. The gregarious scavengers all look for food and, when one spots some, his actions tell the others who join in at the right place. They can wheel about quickly, alight on rough water and swim rapidly while floating high. Gulls also fly inland, feasting on grasshoppers and other insects.

Do you have a question to Ask Andy? Send it on a post card with your name, age and complete address to Ask Andy in care of The Herald, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. Entries are open to boys and girls 7 to 17.

MARK TRAIL

Last April, the showers caught Chris Armbruster empty-handed.

This April, she's doing much better at Home.

There are lots of ways you can get soaked, by a sudden shower, or by a bad investment.

At Home Federal Savings you can avoid both. Deposit $250 or more in a passbook savings account, and we'll give you a free umbrella.

Your money will go to work for you in an insured-safe account, earning 5 1/4% interest—more than any bank can pay on similar accounts. It will compound predictably with daily interest. Also, deposits made by the tenth of the month earn interest from the first, if left in your account until the end of the calendar quarter.

And your umbrella will go to work for you whenever it rains, keeping you safe and dry from unpredictable spring skies. It's available in blue, red and tan for ladies and black for men.

So open an account at a convenient Home Federal branch office near you. And start saving for a rainy day.

Offer good at Buffalo Grove branch office.

Limit of one gift per family.
Offer good until April 30, 1977, or while supply lasts.

Deposit $250 or more and get a free umbrella.

5 1/4% Passbook. Interest paid from day of deposit to day of withdrawal. 5.39% Annual Yield*

*Maximum yield based on interest (compounded daily) allowed to accumulate in the account for one annual period. A substantial interest penalty is required for early withdrawal of certificate accounts. Deposits must remain in the account for a minimum 90-day period, or the cost of the gift will be deducted from the account balance.

You may also choose from the following accounts at any Home Federal office. (They do not qualify for umbrella offer):

Variety is spice of life for Peter Marshall

by Vernon Scott

Television's host of hosts is Peter Marshall, whose smiling presence is seen five hours a week on the tube — morning, noon and night.

Marshall, best known for his wit and poise as he presides over "Hollywood Squares," is the lineal descendant of pioneer television hosts Art Linkletter and Ralph Edwards.

He is, however, less self-conscious than the shy Edwards and not so unctuous as Linkletter in his prime.

Marshall has a pleasant, relaxed manner and an open, friendly face. There is an air of pink-cheeked, apple pie wholesomeness about him. His spectacles and overbite save him from being too handsome.

While he likes to link himself with the last gasps of vaudeville and the heyday of nightclubs — when he and the late Tommy Noonan were a comedy team — Marshall's principle forte is his geniality.

He is cordiality personified to contestants and panelists alike on "Hollywood Squares."

He has discovered amiability is no small talent. It's made him a millionaire, which is more than could ever be said about his singing, dancing and comedy act.

Yet Marshall has persisted in his desire to be a music man. He is host and chief star of the new 90-minute syndicated series, "The Peter Marshall Variety Show," and plays Las Vegas with his own troupe several times a year.

"The new TV show is pure entertainment,"

Marshall said the other day. "I love it. The show gives me an opportunity to do what I like best — sing and dance."

Marshall is seen five days a week on NBC's daytime version of "Squares." The twice weekly ABC version is a nighttime offering. His syndicated show is taped at CBS. He covers all three networks that way.

"My activities aside from the 'Squares' is good for me," he said. "During the first few years of the show I played golf all the time and got complacent. I was getting lazy."

"The pressures began to build when I got a few dollars in the bank. Panic set in. You say to yourself, 'My God, this is all going to end. Then what'll I do?'"

"I don't want to do another game show or talk show. I want to go back to variety where I started. And that's what I'm doing."

"The insecurity of even modest success is a peculiar thing. I've always worked but there was a time when I could take off more than two weeks a year. I knew I could get work and didn't worry about it."

"Now, it's different. There seems to be a necessity to press on and seek greater success."

"Eleven years ago, when 'Squares' went on the air, I'd been in show business a long time. But I was virtually unknown to millions and millions of viewers. Then, pow, I became an instant celebrity."

"In the beginning 'Squares' got only a 14 or 15 per cent share of the audience. Then after about a year it jumped up to a 43 per cent share. It was as if everyone in the country discovered us at once.

"If the networks have a good show with low ratings, they should leave it on and one day the people will discover it. That's what happened to 'Happy Days,' 'Bonanza' and a lot of others."

"Sometimes I worry about over-exposure what with being on the air five hours a week. But Johnny Carson is on the air a lot longer than that and it hasn't hurt him at all."

His other activities notwithstanding, Marshall is indelibly associated with "Hollywood Squares" where he has been a delightful foil for some of the brightest comedians in show business.

"I have nothing to do with the selection of the stars who play the game," he said. "I'm grateful for that. When friends ask to be part of the panel I don't have to hurt anyone's feelings."

"In 11 years I've only asked the producers to put four people on the panel. One was my sister, Joanne Dru. We'd never worked together. Two others were Walter Matthaw and George C. Scott, both of whom asked to be part of it."

"The only other person I've sought out to be on 'Squares' was George Gobel, who has become a regular. He combines some of the qualities of Wally Cox and Charlie Weaver, plus being his own original self."

"I love hosting the show and I enjoy the people I work with. But it's still more fun to get out there and sing and dance."

(UPI)

Peter Marshall hosts "Hollywood Squares" weekdays at 9:30 a.m. on Channel 5, a nighttime offering of the same show twice each week on Channel 7 and the "The Peter Marshall Variety Show."

Barry Manilow

Q. I have some questions about Barry Manilow. Does he have a Chicago Fan Club? Are he and Penny Marshall brother and sister, I saw them together and they look alike.

M.A.

A. We were not able to locate a fan club and Arista Records was not able to help. Penny and Barry are not related, but I agree, they do look alike. Write him at Columbia Record Archives, 9th Floor, 51 West 52nd Street, New York, N. Y. 10019.

Clark Gable

Q. Two programs that were on this season were outstanding in my opinion "Gone With the Wind" and "Roots." Will either be shown again? Also, will you please print a picture of Clark Gable, he was super. L.M.

A. NBC paid $10 million for one showing of "Gone With the Wind" and have no other plans for it at this time. The ABC brass say they won't consider rerunning "Roots" for at least 18 months. Here's our favorite picture of Clark.

Barbra Streisand

Q. I have a few questions. I heard that Bing Crosby recently fell off of a stage and is paralyzed. When did this happen? Also, where can I write to Barbra Streisand? Would you please print a picture of her. Thank you. L.N.

A. Bing did fall while rehearsing for his last special and although he is healing slowly there have been no reports of paralysis. You can write Barbra at Columbia Records Archives, 9th Floor, 51 West 52nd Street, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Orson Welles will make his 13th appearance in 15 months on "The Tonight Show" when he is guest host on Monday, April 25. Welles enjoys hosting the show and NBC likes the ratings he receives so we'll probably see more of him in the future.

Richard Widmark will narrate "Tiger, Tiger," an hour-long special filmed in Nepal and India to be presented Thursday, April 28 on the CBS Television Network. The special traces the history of these magnificent cats, now an endangered species.

"The Hunchback of Notre Dame," the new BBC production of Victor Hugo's classic story, will have its American premiere on NBC, Saturday, May 28. The program marks a continuation of the cooperative agreement between NBC and the British Broadcasting Corporation, formed nearly four years ago, for the exchange of major dramatic specials.

The 31st Annual Tony Awards presentation, the best of the award shows in our opinion, will be telecast live on ABC, Sunday, June 5. The show features performances by Broadway actors and actresses in production numbers and excerpts from hit shows.

Filming is underway on "Hearts of the West" a half-hour comedy development project for NBC Television. The story is based on the 1975 movie that starred Jeff Bridges, Andy Griffith and Alan Arkin.

Editor's note ...

This story belongs to Bill Hill from start to finish. More than two months ago, he suggested we send him to Bloomington, Ill. to try and capture in print the elaborate annual production billed as The Original American Passion Play.

Bill, who is the Arlington Heights municipal reporter for The Herald, remembered the play from the time he was 12 years old and went to see it with a busload of people from his church in Mazon, Ill. Later, his older brother, Robert, appeared in the play. Still later, Bill was reminded of the play as a student at Illinois State University in neighboring Normal.

The Passion Play is more than a stage production. It has become a community tradition, drawing hundreds of ordinary people from Central Illinois into the roles of actor, stagehand and production assistant. People from all over Illinois travel singly and in groups to see this moving theatrical production. We hope Bill's words and photographer Dave Tonge's pictures bring a part of that experience to you.

Designed to help readers decide which movies they want to see, this guide includes a listing of movies currently playing in the Northwest suburban area plus capsule summaries and comments based on reports of the Independent Film Journal, for selected films of interest to readers.

"A Star Is Born" — The perpetual presence of Barbra Streisand looms large over this lavish remake of the twice-told Hollywood classic, updated to the rock music scene of the 1970s with Kris Kristofferson as the falling star she romances and finally eclipses. Streisand's very good and so's the music, but the story — and potential emotional involvement — have been badly diluted by the imbalance of her excesses. (R)

"Slap Shot" — Paul Newman plays the aging player-coach of a third-rate local hockey team in George Roy Hill's vulgar, violent and exuberantly funny look at the casual brutality and lowlife mentality that characterize the sport. Obscene language and bonecrushing action may offend many, but it's all played for liberating laughs. (R)

"Network" — The quartet of award-caliber performances by Peter Finch, Faye Dunaway, Robert Duvall and William Holden is a whopping show in itself in this biting look at a television network, the cutthroat tactics rampant behind-the-scenes and the questionable message delivered by the medium to its viewers. 'HE IS RISEN'

Somber in tone, literal in its translation, the Bloomington, Ill. Passion Play is an awe-inspiring experience

by Bill Hill

"I am with you always, even unto the end of the world," He speaks as the disciples kneel in front of him with arms raised. And with the help of some near-invisible wires, He rises, with an enveloping cloud in front of Him for added effect. And angels appear behind Him in the heavens as singers break into the Hallelujah chorus.

A spotlight aimed at His face gets steadily brighter and He seems to smile, bringing a shivery feeling of triumphant joy to the audience.

The breath-taking Ascension is the final scene of the American Passion Play. To most of the 20,000 who view the play each year, it probably is the most moving scene in the four-hour story. And, except for the miracle of Jesus walking on water, it is the most complex of fifty-six scenes in the play.

The production is billed as The Original American Passion Play. Now in its 54th year, it is presented at the Scottish Rite Temple in downtown Bloomington, Ill., through May 15 this year on nine consecutive Sundays and a few Saturdays.

In an era in which the stories of Jesus Christ and his disciples have been modernized into such boxoffice successes as Jesus Christ Superstar and Godspell, the American Passion Play still holds to the traditional. There are no modernistic spectres and scenes are presented in all their reality, requiring the audience to leave nothing to the imagination.

Furthermore, Passion Play officials insist it is not "entertainment," but a religious service. Strict quiet is expected. No applause nor cameras are allowed.

Productions like Jesus Christ Superstar and Godspell are disliked by most Passion Play participants, said Bob Johnson, who portrays Christ on alternate weekends.

"Most of the people here have had no dramatic training and it's hard for them to accept shows like that," Johnson said.

"I think Jesus Christ Superstar is fantastic. I often listen to a tape of it while I put my makeup on. Unfortunately, Jesus Christ Superstar didn't take the story to its conclusion. They did Him in and then didn't show the Ascension. They missed the best part."

But the Passion Play is much older and it is less concerned with dramatic techniques. It concentrates on telling the story of Jesus Christ in a straight-forward fashion.

The Bloomington play is the brainchild of Delmar D. Darrah, a drama professor at Illinois Wesleyan University during much of his lifetime. He wrote and first produced the play in 1923, at which time it was offered in twenty-five scenes on five consecutive spring Sundays.

The popularity of the play has grown steadily. Busloads of people from across Illinois journey to see it. This year it was sold out two months in advance of its opening performance March 20.

More than 300 Central Illinois residents are involved in the play. None is a professional actor. "They are strictly amateurs, mostly housewives and farmers. Twenty per cent probably once appeared in a high school play," said Harry Riddle, director of the play this year.

Their purpose is not to act, but only to portray the life of Jesus Christ. Prior to the start of the play, Riddle is surrounded on stage by the entire cast for a short prayer and a final word: "Don't be nervous. You're portraying a time and a people. Focus on it and remember you're telling the story of Christ."

The story is well-known to most of the audience. But probably never have the teachings and events of Jesus Christ's life been portrayed so vividly for them.

Darrah's play stresses accuracy. He journeyed to the Holy Lands during four summers before staging the first performance.

"He lived among the people, went to their weddings, and saw how they dressed. He made sketches of everything and brought back yards and yards of material for costumes, water jugs and other small props. He was very meticulous about getting things right," said Sam Buck, a 74-year-old retired Methodist minister who could serve as historian for the play.

Passion Play officials stress that as new research is completed, scenes are revised. New scenes, properties, and effects are constantly being added, action revised and the atmosphere enlarged.

Darrah created the play for commemorative purposes, but Buck can remember when the play in its beginning encountered opposition from area clergy. "They insisted it was sacrilegious," he said.

The Bloomington Passion Play now is considered among the best by many experts because of its accuracy and because it picks up Christ's life earlier than most similar productions, showing some of His sermons and miracles, rather than just the events leading to His crucifixion.

The Bloomington play also is unique in that it uses a fictitious character who has been played by the professorial Buck for the past nineteen years. Riddle describes him as "the most believable of all the characters in the play."

The character is Malachi, an Old Testament name, who was inserted into the script by Darrah for one special purpose: to reflect the feelings of the people in the audience.

"Malachi serves as the voice of the people. I think Mr. Darrah was a genius in drama for putting in the character," Buck said.

Malachi appears in about eight scenes. He can be recognized immediately because of his black and white striped robe, bright white hair and a crooked cane that Darrah brought back from the Holy Land.

Malachi is one who is converted, portraying a rabble-rouser initially, but then a defender of Christ after he is touched by the Christus as He rides into town on an ass.

"Darrah felt there ought to be someone among all the opposition against the whippings and so forth who would stick up for the Master."

"I just come in every so often, so it breaks the tension and keeps alive the idea that there is someone here still on His side. When the people feel like bawling out Judas, Malachi does it for them. It satisfies psychologically the hearts of the people," Buck said.

The Passion Play requires considerable time and devotion from members of the cast and stage crews, but they get no monetary compensation. Ticket sales receipts are put right back into the costs of production. Recently a mammoth lighting system costing $85,000 was installed. The huge canvas backdrops often must be repaired or replaced, which can cost as much as $2,500 each. And some costumes require the work of expert seamstresses.

"It once took an expert seamstress eighty-four hours to finish one costume. But there's no expense spared as far as staging is concerned," said Buck, who also serves in the self-appointed role of tour guide after most performances.

"Adults want to go home under the spell of the play, but it's all so spectacular that kids want to know how the scenes are done," Buck said.

The scene in which Jesus walks on water evokes the most questions. "That's one of the shortest scenes, it only has nine speeches, but it took eight years to perfect that scene," Buck said.

The portrayal of that miracle calls for three or four tons of water to fall on the stage in about three minutes. Powerful lights cause it to appear as if the water is falling all over the stage, while actually it is only landing in a narrow stretch across the front of the stage where it is collected and drained by a carefully-laid tarpaulin.

The scene is enhanced by thunder and lightning, the rocking of a boat behind moving waves, blowing clouds and finally a magnificent rainbow.

Buck also is asked to explain how the Christus is raised by wires hooked to a belt-like harness in the Ascension scene. That scene, too, takes careful synchronization. One Christus once found himself doing a full twist in mid air during the play's final scene.

Buck also is eager to point out to all who will listen how the sound effects are produced, how the highly-technical lighting system can change the mood of scenes, and such tidbits as the fact that 236 pieces of staging are used in the House of Caiaphas scene and thirty real silver dollars are paid to Judas for his betrayal of Jesus.

"The play is so tremendous you can't get it all the first time. Even as a minister, I'd learn something new each performance," Buck said.

And now that he is retired, Buck says, "It's the biggest part of my life.

"It's a chance for me and 300 others to tell the greatest story on earth." §

Incongruous activities on the other side of the set

Standing high on the catwalk that stretches across one side of the stage's ceiling, six men stand tensed, ready to react to the flashing light and synchronized buzzer that signals them into action.

In a flash, they reach high, almost jumping to pull the cables that lift and drop the canvas backdrops into place. In a matter of seconds the assignment is completed. They then study their papers to check which of the eighty-five backdrops must be readied for the next scene.

Far below, more than 250 costumed actors prepare for their appearances, being careful to stay out of the way of stagehands who hurriedly push scenery and props to and from the stage.

In one corner, near the front of the stage, three men sit at a control desk that looks as if it were borrowed from a spaceship. Only they can understand the maze of dials and switches that control lighting for the American Passion Play.

The behind-the-scenes activity of the production are on-going. While one scene is being performed, two or three others are being set up on the large stage at the Scottish Rite Temple in Bloomington. This allows the pauses between scenes to usually last less than 30 seconds. In a few instances the transition between scenes is achieved by having two sets in place at once with the cast then merely walking from one scene to another.

The activity backstage seems especially unusual. Open a door and you're bound to be confronted by a full-grown donkey, or some guy dressed in a colorful bathrobe-type outfit leading a baby lamb on a leash, or little shepherd boys sipping Cokes. During intermission you can count on finding the Roman guards, all men well over six feet tall and 200 pounds, in full costume playing pinochle.

The seriousness of the play somehow is not always transferred to the backstage areas. As the play's assistant director, Barry Weer, puts it: "The greatest thing about being a part of the play is the fellowship with so many great people."

It definitely is a family affair — there's always room for Mom, Dad and all the kids if the interest is there. And once they get involved, they stay forever. "Twenty-five year participation is not at all unusual," said Harry Riddle, director of the play. About 97 per cent come back each year.

They come from all walks of life. Mostly they are farmers and housewives, and college students from Illinois Wesleyan University and Illinois State University often join. But there also are professionals: John the Baptist repairs computers for a living and Riddle is an architect.

The mob scenes provide a place and stage appearances for those who have no desire to say any lines and are content to be "extras." There also are various stage crews, wardrobe and makeup duties, and the choir for people to join.

One man who has worked in nearly every area of the play is Harry Rhoads, 88, who has missed only one performance of the Passion Play since it began in 1923. His one "absence" was due to surgery.

"When I started out I was in the mob. We gave them Roman guards a good time in those days," said the old railroader as he grabbed for another Swisher Sweet cigar.

"And I use to be the one to help the Christ off the cross. I was on the stage crew for ten or twelve years. Then I took over the wardrobe department when the head man died," he said.

Rhoads now is supervisor emeritus of that department. He still wears the special blue shirt over his regular clothes which shows he is part of the wardrobe staff. The sleeves are rolled up to show he's ready to lend a hand, but mostly he sits in a rocking chair and gabs.

"We have one devil of a good time behind the scenes. You make great friendships, meet spouses and then have kids in the play, too," Rhoads said.

"My boy is still on the usher staff. He'll be 65 in July — 50 years in the play," he said.

As for changes Rhoads sees in the play since it was started 54 years ago: "Well, people's feet are a lot bigger now," he said in all seriousness. "Four guys have to get their own sandals made special. I contribute it to them playing basketball on those hard floors."

"No, things haven't changed much," Riddle agreed. "But the more we do it, the more popular it gets." — B.H.

Eighty-eight year old Harry Rhoads has only missed one performance of the Passion Play since it started in 1923. A former actor in the play, Rhoads is now supervisor emeritus of the wardrobe department.

Trading in their business suits for Biblical robes

The small television set in the closet-sized room is turned down, but the two men's eyes glance toward it occasionally to check the score of the basketball game.

Bob Johnson of Peoria is an advertising manager for a small weekly newspaper. Ed Weatherley is a purchasing agent for a corn belt electric cooperative.

Except on Sundays, and a few Saturdays, each spring. On those days they portray Jesus Christ.

"They call me the fat Jesus and Ed the short Jesus," says Johnson with a chuckle.

Both men speak softly. It is intermission at the play and Weatherley looks as if he needs the 15-minute rest. "Got any nectar," he asks a stage hand.

Harry Riddle, director of the play and formerly cast in the role of the Christ, stops by to tell Weatherley things are going well. "Go just a bit slower though," he advises.

It is Weatherley's turn to play Christ at the play's dress rehearsal. He alternates with Johnson through the nine-week schedule.

Weatherly, 51, is only the sixth person to play the role. It was through a neighbor that he got interested in the play sixteen years ago and subsequently joined the cast.

Ed Weatherley, a purchasing agent for an electric cooperative.

He started out portraying Annas, a member of the Sanhedrins. And for several years he had understudied for the part of Malachi until one day the play's director thrust into his hand the speaking lines for Christ.

"I was unsure about taking the part. I was used to seeing tall people in the part (he is 5 feet 9 inches) and I had always said I'd quit the play after ten years.

"I really was quite shocked. I showed the book to my son, who was a member of the mob, and he thought it was a fantastic idea. So I accepted," he said.

Weatherley now is in his sixth year as Christ.

Johnson, 46, also had several roles in the fourteen years he's been with the play. He started as John the Baptist, became a disciple, a member of the Sanhedrin and then Pontius Pilate.

Previously active in some community theater groups, Johnson has more acting experience than most other members of the Passion Play cast.

Neither man does much more than some deep-knee bends or possibly some yawning exercises (to relax their throats) in preparation for the play.

"One guy use to come three hours before the play, shut himself in a room and meditate. I don't think you have to do that to play the part," Johnson said.

"When the curtain comes up I'm in character. Offstage, I step out of character. It has to be natural. Actually, it's an easy role, once you get the lines," he said.

"Getting the lines right can be scary, especially in the opening Sermon on the Mount scene," said Weatherley.

"It's a frightening experience when you sit on that rock and think about who you're portraying. For me, it's the hardest scene. The people out there know the beatitudes, so if you screw up they're going to know it. I just say a prayer before the curtain goes up. I know I can't do it myself, so I pray to God for help," Weatherley said.

Both men are from "churchgoing" families. Johnson also ran a church camp near Bloomington for five years.

They say they have attempted to humanize the character of Christ over the years. "He doesn't smile much, but there are scenes where we feel He should look pleasant," Johnson said.

Portraying Jesus Christ has not changed their own personalities, Johnson and Weatherley agree. "In all honesty, it's a role like anyone else's in the play. It's a humbling experience and it certainly hasn't made me any worse, but I don't know if it has made me any better," Johnson said with a smile.

Bob Johnson, an advertising manager for a weekly newspaper.

And with that he got up to leave, brushing aside the bedsheet that provided some privacy for the room.

He walked across the stage behind the curtain where Weatherley and the disciples were arranging themselves around a table for the Last Supper scene. He talked briefly with each man. Finally, he put his hand on the shoulder of Judas, said something, smiled and walked to the other end of the stage. From there he watched his friends break bread and drink wine from a chalice held by a character he knows very well. B.H.

MEXICO CITY — I thought I knew all about Mexico.

After all, I have seen the Westerns where the Mexican is cast as the bad guy, the classic bandito with the wicked laugh and boorish manner, his chest criss-crossed with belts of ammunition.

Then there's the Mexican depicted in cartoons. He's the lazy fellow sleeping by the side of a building, his face hidden by a giant sombrero.

And, of course, everyone has heard that Mexico is a hot, dusty place and that the food is indigestible and the water contaminated.

So when I headed south of the border last month, I went expecting to find a parched desert and not a drop of water fit to drink. I was sure I would encounter the same sly Mexican with the leering grin and I would quickly clutch my shoulder bag to my chest.

And I had my heart set on snapping a picturesque photo of a native wearing a sombrero taking his siesta in the shade of a palm tree.

But except for the peddlers who were selling them, the only sombrero I saw was worn by a tourist toting a Japanese camera and a plastic flight bag.

And instead of leering grins and evil

Information for this article was gathered during a press tour of Mexico sponsored and financed by American Airlines, Americana Hotels and the Mexican National Tourism Council.

glances there were warm smiles and happy faces.

And throughout my stay I waited for Montezuma's inevitable revenge, but to this day I remain surprisingly healthy.

What I learned was that Mexico suffers from a bad image, an image that is not entirely deserved. Like most stereotypes, I found an element of truth in the picture I had painted of Mexico, but as with all blatant generalizations, that picture was grossly exaggerated.

Despite its unfortunate image and the bad publicity it has received in recent months, Mexico should not be excluded as a vacation destination this year. This country has much to offer the traveler. The people are friendly and life does seem to move at a slower pace which is conducive to forgetting your cares and relaxing in the sun with or without a sombrero. Safety is not a concern for tourists who exercise common sense.

The climate in most of Mexico is beautiful. Mexico City has cool and refreshing weather as a result of its altitude in the central mountain area. Coastal areas such as Acapulco are hot and humid, but who cares when you can get a beautiful tan in an afternoon and cool off by taking a dip in the hotel swimming pool.

During the summer months it often rains in the evenings, but that is compensated because the tourist pays the low, off season rates. And now that the peso has been devalued, Mexico is a bargain all year round.

There are plenty of things to see and do in Mexico. Everywhere there is evidence of Mexico's history from the Indian period to the Spanish conquest to the revolution. In Mexico City there is the National Palace, Chapultepec park and castle, and within an hour's drive are the prehistoric Indian pyramids and ruins of Teotihuacan. In Acapulco there are the colorful marketplaces and of course the beaches and water sports such as parasailing (sky gliding over Acapulco Bay suspended from a parachute tethered to a speeding motorboat).

Contrary to popular belief, Mexican cuisine is not all tacos and enchiladas oozing with hot sauce. I discovered some good steaks and some excellent seafood. What they say about the drinking water is probably true, however, but drinking water can be avoided by sticking to salty margaritas and sweet pina colodas. There's also Coca-Cola and no one blinks an eye if it is ordered without ice. (What do you think ice is made of?) Actually the water in most of the large hotels has been purified and is safe to drink.

All this is not to say that everything is rosy in Mexico. The country does have its problems and some of those problems are of particular concern to the tourist.

Tourism has been dealt quite a blow in Mexico. The most recent punch came last winter from the American Automobile Association (AAA) when it sent its members strict warnings against driving in certain parts of Mexico. In the northwestern area of Mexico, particularly on the Baja peninsula and in the state of Sinaloa, there were honest-to-goodness banditos preying upon unsuspecting motorists. Highway 15, which runs south from the border to Mazatlan, was pinpointed as a particularly dangerous thoroughfare. According to the U.S. State Department, nineteen Americans were victims of this brand of highway robbery. At least three were killed, including an Illinois minister and his daughter, who were murdered in their car on Christmas Day.

The Mexican government took quick action to correct the problem, promising the AAA it would install a nation-wide telephone hotline staffed by bilingual personnel and expand its "Green Angel" mobile units which cruise along highways dispensing aid to travelers. Army troops also were sent to patrol Highway 15.

The AAA warning, while it was directed mainly at the northwestern parts of the country (where much of Mexico's illegal drug production is centered), had a ripple effect on resort areas further south which were already on their backs from the knockout delivered in 1975 by Luis Echeverria, who was then President of Mexico.

It was under Echeverria that Mexico cast its United Nations vote against Zionism, an action which greatly offended America's Jewish population and triggered mass cancellations at popular Mexican resorts.

Just what affect these events have had on Mexico's tourism industry is unclear. There have been various news reports that tourism took a dive in 1975 and has not yet recovered, but a tourism official I spoke to in Acapulco

said tourism is up dramatically from last year thanks to the travel bargains brought about by the devalued peso. An American Airlines representative told me the airline anticipated a decline in tourism months ago and ordered a cutback in flights. The decline did not occur and airline officials now wish they had those extra flights.

One thing is clear. Mexico's economy is in need of the U.S. tourist's dollar. Tourism accounts for roughly a third of Mexico's income and the promoting of tourism is a top priority of Mexico's new President Jose Lopez Portillo.

The transfer of government to Lopez Portillo may be the best thing to happen to tourism in Mexico in years. Not only is he committed to putting tourism back on its feet but he's also taken hold of some of the social problems that plague Mexico — lawlessness, illiteracy, lack of communication, overpopulation, unemployment, and a governmental bureaucracy that is often inefficient and corrupt.

Some of these problems are apparent to tourists. Driving through Mexico City it is obvious that this is an urban area that has grown almost overnight. Mexico City is the second largest city in the world (Tokyo is first). Its population is nearing 12 million and it has all the problems of a big city — pollution, urban blight, traffic congestion. But tourists should not forget that Mexico City also has the attractions of a big city — an active nightlife, fancy restaurants and hotels, and cultural events and attractions.

Mexico's unemployment problem was made worse by the devaluation of the peso last fall which resulted in worker lay-offs and price increases. But while devaluation created a hardship for the average Mexican it was a boon to American tourists. The rate of exchange for years was 12.5 pesos to the dollar but it now fluctuates between 20 and 23 pesos to the dollar, which means a substantial savings for Americans despite the price increases that followed devaluation.

For example, a moderately priced double hotel room at the Fiesta Palace in Mexico City, one of the hotels in the Fiesta Americana chain, went for 600 pesos or about $48 last year. When the peso was devalued, the hotel raised the price of that room to 800 pesos but the price actually dropped for Americans because 800 pesos are now worth about $40, a savings of at least $8 over last year's price.

It's nice to find a bargain in Mexico because one of the things that gripes the tourist the most is the feeling that everyone is after his money — the street peddler, the cab driver, the pickpocket. The average Mexican is an honest fellow but there are a few unscrupulous characters who have contributed to Mexico's unfortunate image. Of course, the boorish American who comes down here flashing a fistful of dollars in the faces of those who are less than wealthy does not help to correct the situation.

Beware of pickpockets in Mexico, especially in crowded areas which are frequented by tourists. Don't carry around a fat bankroll in your back pocket and don't leave your purse open or unattended. Many hotels in Acapulco advise against carrying cash or valuables on the beach.

When shopping in Mexico check out the merchandise before you buy. There are some real bargains, especially in silver, but look for the eagle insignia on your purchase. It indicates that the silver is a good quality. Bargaining is common, especially in marketplaces, and both the tourists and the sellers seem to enjoy it.

Tourists should also be forewarned that, except in Mexico City, few taxis have meters so drivers can charge just about any price they think seems fair. While in Acapulco I was with a large group of people who were planning to Scenes of Acapulco — When the sun goes down Acapulco is set ablaze with lights (above) and another night of merrymaking at this popular Pacific resort is under way. Peddlers on some of the public beaches in Acapulco (left) seem to outnumber tourists at times and they sell almost anything imaginable. Acapulco is famous for its water sports but who would guess that beautiful Acapulco Bay (right) is really polluted with sewage?

Wilderness trips in Greenland set for summer

Greenland, the world's largest island, its interior covered by an immense ice cap, its rocky coast rimmed by mountain ranges, will be explored on two camping-hiking outings this summer.

Mountain Travel, Inc., a specialist in arranging wilderness travel, is offering trips July 20 to Aug. 12 and Aug. 10-31. Each trip will be limited to ten persons. Trip leaders, Mike Banks and Angus Erskine of Great Britain, are both experienced polar explorers.

Cost ranges from $1,520 to $1,695 per person excluding airfare. For more information write for free catalog to: Mountain Travel, 1398 Solano Ave., Albany, Calif. 94706. Telephone (415) 527-8100.

New driving guide for Mexico now available

Vacationers taking advantage of Mexico's bargain climate following the peso devaluation may be interested in a new fly/drive brochure, "Mexico (The how and where Driving Guide)."

Available from your travel agent, the 16-page, four-color guide features eight suggested driving tours plus traveler information. Included are illustrated explanations of international road signs, a mileage table, a chart giving altitudes above sea level for key cities and a table showing the types of tourist attractions and services. Both modern and ancient attractions along each of the eight driving routes are pointed out and briefly described in the text. Mileage distances between major cities are also indicated.

Sightseeing cruises on the Mexican Caribbean

The Fiesta Maya, a newly-constructed, 500-horsepower motor vessel, now provides sightseeing cruise service six times weekly for visitors to Cancun, the new Fonatur resort in the Mexican Caribbean.

The Fiesta Maya departs from Fiesta Pier at Bojorquez Lagoon just opposite the El Presidente Hotel at 10 a.m. daily except Mondays. Capacity is 200 passengers and is $7.50 for a three-hour cruise of Nichupte Lagoon at Cancun, Bahia de Mujeres and the coastline of Isla Mujeres.

Glass-bottomed wells in the ship afford views of marine life. Included in the price are two drinks. Sandwiches and snacks are available at additional cost. A small group provides music for dancing, and a tour guide narrates on the public address system in Spanish and English.

Package plans available for Mexican resorts

Mexico's devalued peso has made a sunny vacation south of the border a travel bargain. Puerto Vallarta, Cancun and Acapulco are in their best season — and within affordable price ranges.

To the low cost of a Mexican vacation, American Express has added another bargain: the cost of getting there is cheaper, too. Group travel airfare (GIT) rates, always lower than an individually-priced ticket, are usually attached to group tours. Now, individual vacationers can fly from Chicago to Mexico with a group — and travel on their own to a favorite Atlantic or Pacific resort city, or even Baja, Mexico City, or Taxco on an American Express land package. Savings on the airfare will be almost $60 per person.

A week in Mexico City may be purchased from $76 to $175 (depending upon hotel chosen). The weekend group airfare is $169, bringing the total cost of the vacation from $251 to $350. Included in this package are airfare, round trip transfers, accommodations, hotel and airport taxes, a welcome cocktail and sightseeing tour of the city.

To book these Mexican programs, see your travel agent.

Pensacola — gateway on the Gulf

Imagine going for a morning swim or a stroll along an uncluttered beach. One might think it's only possible on some deserted Caribbean island, but actually it's as close as Florida.

Pensacola, western gateway city to the state, is far from a deserted island, but its atmosphere is just as pleasant. Its beaches, preserved in simplicity and solitude, await the discriminating traveler who seeks a minimally commercial surrounding for a relaxing vacation.

Ample accommodations to fit all size budgets are grouped in a strip, but then thin out, giving way to long stretches of sand dunes and beaches where the true flavor of the fresh air and seascape dominates.

The beach is a mecca for residents and visitors alike. The Gulf Islands National Seashore Park encompasses picnicking sites, open beach areas, campsites and guided tours of Fort Pickens, where the Apache Chieftan Geronimo was held captive from 1886 to 1888.

A hop inland, to the city itself, reveals another side of Pensacola, one that reflects its leisurely lifestyle. Proud of its cultural heritage, the city's historical heart still beats of yesteryear, thanks to efforts by the Historic Pensacola Preservation Board. The board has set aside an area for preservation and restoration, radiating from Seville Square, a public park complete with gazebo.

A free walking tour allows visitors to step back into those romantic days when great rigged sailships glided into the bay, soldiers from different nations walked the streets and Indians came into town to trade their furs.

Old Christ Church, one of the oldest buildings in Northwest Florida, still stands on its original site. The design of the building is attributed to Christopher Wren, the famous 17th and 18th Century English architect. The church now houses the Pensacola Historical Museum, and its collection of costumes and relics recaptures the flavor of a city governed by five nations.

Walking along the historic district, one encounters the Gray House, which reflects the Key West architectural style. It is rumored that a Spanish ghost who identifies himself as Thomez Maristo inhabits the almost-100-year-old house. True or not, the image fits well in this peaceful district of years past.

The list of historic buildings and sites goes on and on, while architectural styles range from the gothic revival style of St. Michael's Church to the gingerbread-frilled Steamboat House.

Quaint shops dot the historic district. Most are housed in restored 18th and 19th Century cottages and mansions. The shopkeepers of Historic Seville place emphasis on quality merchandise and old-fashioned personal service. The goods available include imported coffees and teas, hand-crafted pottery, watercolor paintings, antiques and metal sculpture. Parking is free and unrestricted in the area of tree-shaded Seville Square and the surrounding streets.

For fine foods and a complete assortment of after-dark entertainment, Seville Quarter is well-equipped to meet all tastes. Situated within the historic district and open seven days a week, the Quarter consists of Rosie O'Grady's, Palace Courtyard, Lili Marlene's, Coppersmith's Galley, Palace Oyster Bar, Seville Quarter Courtyard and End of the Alley Bar.

The heart of the Quarter is Rosie O'Grady's, a good-time emporium where banjo strummers, Dixieland bands and dancing waiters bring back the showboat era. Lili Marlene's, a World War I aviator pub, features historic mementos, antiques and live entertainment. The motto here is "Never let the truth interfere with a good flying story." Not to be outdone, the Palace Courtyard boasts stained glass, princess chairs, fountains and banana trees as a dramatic setting for this contemporary entertainment night club.

Delicious seafood is the specialty of most Pensacola restaurants, and Coppersmith's Galley and the Palace Oyster Bar live up to that tradition. Coppersmith's also has a menu of favorites including prime rib, steaks, quiche and omelets. And patrons have the opportunity to purchase the antiques that decorate the restaurant.

Remembering the ill-fated Titanic

by Bob Gallas

The icy sea was strangely calm as the huge ocean liner plowed on toward her New York destination. It was shortly before midnight April 14, 1912.

She was the biggest, the best, unsinkable, it was said, and on her maiden voyage across the Atlantic she carried more than 2,000 passengers and crew.

Most never even heard the grinding crash far below the ship's waterline that cut a gash the length of a football field in her hull. Slightly more than two hours later, the mighty Titanic slipped to a watery grave 12,000 feet deep, taking more than 1,500 people with her in what would become a symbol of the greatest maritime disaster ever.

It has been sixty-five years since that fateful April night in the mid-Atlantic, yet the mighty lady lives on, an English ship that has become part of American folklore. A new bestseller fictionalizes a day when the Titanic will be raised from the deep. The Titanic Historical Society publishes a quarterly newsletter about the ship. And several movies about the disaster are still favorites on the late show.

And now, twenty-one years after it was first published, Walter Lord's book on the Titanic Disaster, "A Night to Remember," is enjoying renewed popularity.

A new illustrated edition of the book was published in November (Holt, Rinehart and Winston, $12.95) with a number of photos of the Titanic, her crew and artifacts from the ghost liner.

"It's the book on which I get the most mail, even twenty years after it was published. But then, it's the only book I've written that's been made into a movie," said Lord, who has written six other books and is presently working on one about World War II South Pacific coastwatchers. "The question most often asked by those who wrote to me was for pictures, so I added a large number of photos to this edition."

Lord paints a vivid picture of the passengers, crew and last hours of the Titanic in the book, a detailed volume based on hundreds of hours of interviews with Titanic passengers and a vast amount of historical research. Lord's interest in the Titanic dates back to his boyhood. He even took a cruise on the Olympic, the Titanic's sister ship which was an exact replica of the sunken liner.

"There's a family legend that I talked my family into sailing on the Olympic," said Lord. "I drew a great deal from my recollections. Traditions, customs, the way you lived on those ships never changed, right up until the Queen Mary last sailed."

The Titanic seems destined to live on. As Lord writes, "The appeal is universal. To social historians, it is a microcosm of the early 1900s. To nautical enthusiasts, it is the ultimate shipwreck. To students of human nature it is an endlessly fascinating laboratory. For lovers of nostalgia, it has the allure of yesterday. For day dreamers, it has all those might-have-beens."

The passenger list ran the gamut from the very rich to immigrants seeking a better life in the United States. Bruce Ismay, president of the White Star Lines, which owned the Titanic, was on board, as was the ship's designer, Thomas Andrews.

Opulence was everywhere. Rich panelling and heavy furniture dominated the design in first class. Lost with the ship were hundreds of thousands in cash, jewelry, stocks, bonds, a jeweled copy of "The Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam," 15,000 bottles of ale and stout, 30,000 fresh eggs, 800 cases of shelled walnuts, a case of china for Tiffany's, a case of gloves for Marshall Field's, and a brand new French Renault.

Despite a half dozen warnings of ice ahead during the day, the Titanic plowed on without slackening speed, as if it didn't want to be late for its date with destiny.

It was nearing midnight and many of the first class passengers were playing cards or having a nightcap in one of the lounges. Few ventured outside as the night was freezing. The water temperature was a deadly 28 degrees.

High atop the lookout tower, Frederick Fleet was just about ready to come off watch when he spotted an iceberg as it came out of the darkness dead ahead. Fleet sounded the three-bell alarm to the bridge and relayed specifics — "iceberg — dead ahead."

For more than a half a minute, Fleet and Reginald Lee, who shared the watch, stared in amazement as the ship continued to plow on straight toward the berg. They braced for a crash but at the last minute the ship veered left. They thought it was a close call, but far below, the damage had been done, as the iceberg drifted into the darkness astern.

To those on the upper levels of the ship, the crash was a gentle jar. To those down in third class, it was more of a roar that sent them tumbling out of bed.

The Titanic received its "unsinkable" tag because of its construction, which featured a double bottom and sixteen watertight compartments, which could be sealed in the event of damage. The ship could float with any two of the compartments flooded, which seemed like plenty of protection. But by midnight, Andrews had surveyed the damage and reported to Captain Smith — four compartments had been laid open; the Titanic was sinking. By 12:05 Smith had ordered the first lifeboats away.

But the real drama of the night was just beginning. The "unsinkable" Titanic had a lifeboat capacity of 1,178. On board that night were 2,207 people.

At first, few wanted to take the seventy-foot drop over the side of the ship in a lifeboat, and many of the boats went away only partially filled. The first lifeboat adrift carried only twelve and had a capacity of forty. An hour later there would be no need for persuasion as the Titanic listed heavily at the bow.

The word went out immediately via the "wireless," new in its day, that the Titanic was going down. The nearest ship that heard was fifty-eight miles away and would arrive too late. But a light of another ship, the Californian, which had stopped because of the ice, flickered just ten miles away.

Only an hour ago, the Californian had warned the Titanic's wireless operator that there was ice ahead, but had been cut off by the Titanic.

All night the crew of the Californian had watched the lights of the floundering ship, watched the help rockets which the Titanic had fired and dutifully reported them to the Good plot, plenty of suspense in 'Condominium'

CONDOMINIUM by John D. MacDonald (Lippincott, $10)

Reviewed by Jack Penchoff

Year 'round sunshine with balmy breezes and a comfortable beachfront condominium. Dreams retirements are made of.

But John D. MacDonald has shattered those dreams for his readers and created a well-written suspense novel in the process.

MacDonald has written more than sixty books, sixteen of them in the popular Travis McGee detective series. His latest, "Condominium," is probably his best.

The novel, however, does demonstrate MacDonald's basic flaws: overwriting, some characters who stretch the limits of imagination, and the use of sex as if it was an obligatory part of modern fiction.

But the weaknesses are far outweighed by MacDonald's strengths as a storyteller with a well constructed plot, plenty of suspense and a good blend of the serious and humorous sides of human nature.

Condominium is a kaleidoscope, with retirees frustrated and confused with their new lifestyle, dishonest politicians and greedy developers all thrown together in the Florida Gulf Coast retirement community of Fiddler Key.

But the masterful stroke in "Condominium" is Hurricane Ella, whose imminent appearance in the novel shapes the characters and moves the plot along to its exciting conclusion.

The story revolves around the Golden Sands condominium, an overpriced and shoddily built structure that has made lots of money for Marty Liss, the less-than-honest developer, Liss' financial partners and a crooked county commissioner.

Liss plans to build another condominium next door to the Golden Sands. Because of the overabundance of condominiums in Florida and a shaky real estate market, Liss is forced to obtain the financing from a mysterious Atlanta financier, Sherman Grome, who is being investigated by the FBI and IRS.

Back at Golden Sands, the residents are ready to revolt. As walls crack, air conditioners break down and plumbing quits, the condominium association officers determine they must double the monthly maintenance fee because they failed to read the fine print of the maintenance contract so deftly drawn up by Marty Liss.

To make matters worse, the residents find out too late about Liss' next project when the heavy equipment begins clearing the 14 acre tropical jungle next door to make room for the new structure.

The jungle not only provides the condominium owners a small parcel of tropical foliage amidst the overbuilt high-rise beachfront, but it also acts as a hurricane buffer.

Resident Gus Carver, a retired construction engineer, enlists the aid of Sam Harrison, a Marine engineer who once worked with Carver. Carver convinces millionaire and Golden Sands resident LeGrande Messenger, that the condominium is poorly built and gets Messenger to pay Harrison's consultant fee.

Harrison quickly develops a report that concludes Golden Sands and three neighboring high-rise condominiums will collapse in the wake of a hurricane because of their poor construction.

At this point, MacDonald's storytelling genius takes over with the introduction of Hurricane Ella.

In one paragraph Ella's birth off the Southwest African coast is described. But as the plot speeds to its end and Ella intensifies as she races towards the Florida Gulf coast, the description of the hurricane becomes more elaborate.

As the force of Ella mounts, the ability of the characters to control their fates diminishes. In the end MacDonald twists the kaleidoscope once more, using Ella's churning devastation to redistribute the cast, some landing in surprising places.

The novel is pure escapism, but MacDonald's finely tuned writing places "Condominium" a cut above most popular fiction books.

Investigate your dreams, decipher your personality

PSYCHETYPES: A New Way of Exploring Personality, by Michael Malone, (Dutton, $8.95)

Researchers occasionally announce that almost all Americans can say, without hesitation, what their astrological sign is.

It is that tendency toward self-classification that leads inevitably to books like "Psychetypes." It is clearly the publisher's hope that someday it will be as popular to announce at a cocktail party that, "I'm an intuitive oceanic" as it is to explain, "I'm a Leo."

Michael Malone's "Psychetypes" are based on the theories of pioneer psychotherapist Carl Jung, though Jung doubtless would disavow this use of them. They purport to divide the human race, depending on individual perceptions of time, space and human relationships.

Using his system, Malone explains that such diverse characters as Florence Nightengale and Karl Marx were "thinking territorialists" and Benito Mussolini and Mohandas Gandhi were "sensation volcanics."

If this all sounds rather obscure, it is. Too often the dedicated classifier of people will find himself bogged down in this book in theoretical descriptions such as "Just as a structured psyche is vital to a territorial, so is a structured intellect and a structured life."

A brief description of Malone's theory is almost impossible. He himself takes many pages trying to explain the difference between "sensation" types and "feeling" types. Suffice it to say that he believes the world is split between those who believe time is continuous and those who ignore the past and future and live in the present. Thinking and feeling types are continuous. Sensation and intuitive types are discontinuous.

A reader who can wade through some of the book's jargon may find these types illuminating, but even by the end of the book, it remains difficult to sort out, much less to classify one's friends.

Perhaps a popular magazine will come up with a ten question quiz to allow a person to type himself and his friends and neighbors.

DREAMS ARE YOUR TRUEST FRIENDS, by Joseph Katz Ph.D., (Pocket Books $1.75)

This must be Carl Jung's year. While the author of "Psychetypes" uses his theories to try to start a new fad, the author of this slight volume quotes him in his preface on the subject of dreams and the unconscious.

Once Jung is disposed of — and that takes Dr. Katz just a few paragraphs — "Dreams Are Your Truest Friends" spends its time retelling dreams ranging from those of the nameless psychiatric patients who appear in so many popular psychology books to those of Jacob and Joseph in the Old Testament.

Beyond the natural fascination with dreams — a fascination which can pall after reading enough in succession — the reader of this book receives such insights as "There is a strong reluctance on the part of today's women to being tied down to cultlike institutions of the past."

In the last chapter, "How to Remember Dreams," the author advises that we can all recall our dreams "if we are stimulated and motivated to remember" them.

For anyone who sticks with this book long enough to receive that advice, there is one comforting thought: Some people actually paid more money to buy the hard-bound copy.

Titanic:

sleeping captain of the Californian. The Californian never heard a distress call from the Titanic. Its wireless operator had turned off the set and gone to bed at 11:30.

Of the 2,207 on board, about 1,500 lost their lives that night as the ship dipped below the water for the final time at 2:20 a.m. Hundreds thrown from the ship at the last instant didn't have a chance in the below freezing water and were drowned.

The tragedy had a great affect on ship travel. Lifeboat requirement formulas, which then were complicated to the point of being ridiculous, were changed to simply — have enough boats for all on board. Winter travel lanes were shifted farther south. Wireless operators on ships now manned the machine round the clock.

Lord's book underwent remarkably few changes for the revised edition. One fact Lord wishes he'd added was the depth of the Titanic's resting place — 12,000 feet — another source of endless mail from Titanic followers.

Lord considers himself a student of the Titanic rather than a fanatic follower. He hasn't read the fictionalized account of the raising of the ship, Clive Cussler's "Raise the Titanic," yet, but admits more than casual interest in the possibility.

Lord points out in his book, that the Titanic's story has all the elements of a classic Greek tragedy. "What troubled people especially was not just the tragedy — or even its needlessness — but the element of fate in it all," he wrote. "If the Titanic had heeded any of the six ice messages on Sunday,...if ice conditions had been normal...if the night had been moonlit or rough...if she had seen the berg fifteen seconds sooner — or fifteen seconds later...if she had hit the ice in any other way...if her watertight bulkheads had been one deck higher...if she had carried enough boats...if the Californian had only come. Had any of these ifs turned out right, every life might have been saved. But they all went against her — a classic Greek tragedy."

Lord's foreward to the book perhaps lends the strongest hint to the Titanic's mystic quality.

"In 1898 a struggling author named Morgan Robertson concocted a novel about a fabulous Atlantic liner, far larger than any that had ever been built. Robertson loaded his ship with rich and complacent people and then wrecked it one cold April night on an iceberg. This somehow showed the futility of everything, and in fact, the book was called "Futility" when it appeared that year, published by the firm of M. F. Mansfield.

"Fourteen years later a British shipping company named the White Star Line built a steamer remarkably like the one in Robertson's novel. The new vessel was 66,000 tons displacement; Robertson's was 70,000 tons. The real ship was 882.5 feet long; the fictional one was 800 feet. Both vessels were triple screw and could make 24½ knots. Both could carry about 3,000 people and both had enough lifeboats for only a fraction of this number. But, then, this didn't seem to matter because both ships were labelled unsinkable.

"On April 10, 1912, the real ship left Southampton on her maiden voyage to New York. Her cargo included a priceless copy of The Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam, and a list of passengers collectively worth 250 million dollars. On her way over she too struck an iceberg and went down on a cold April night.

"Robertson called his ship the Titan; The White Star Line called its ship the Titanic."

A do-it-yourself guide for making simple baby toys

HOME-MADE BABY TOYS by Sara K. Swan (Houghton Mifflin, $4.95)

Reviewed by Marge Finch

"Home Made Baby Toys" by Sara K. Swan is an exciting book for parents who have spent frustrating hours in toy stores trying to find stimulating, well-constructed toys that will interest their children and help them learn.

Mrs. Swan, a mother and former Montessori teacher, gives specific directions for making thirty-three toys and gives worthwhile advice for other toys and activities.

The author explains that she started making toys for her own children after being frustrated by the poor quality of store-bought ones. Drawing on past experience, she lists suggestions for simple materials to save for making toys, such as scraps of materials, buttons, plastic bottles, jar lids and drawer pulls and warns about precautions to follow in making safe toys for young children.

Buttons should be at least 1½ inches in diameter, mobiles with delicate things on them should be put away as the child grows older and starts pulling on things. She advises the toymaker to be careful to use non-toxic glue and lead-free paint and to use heavy elastic, not thin cord or rubber bands.

The book is divided into chapters by age level — from the early weeks to two years of age — and at the beginning of each chapter, Mrs. Swan gives an explanation of toys that are appropriate for the age level and the uses for the toys. For babies four to five months she includes a variety of tactual toys such as texture pads, simple leather animals and texture balls made with materials like cloth, old stockings or cotton.

Twelve to eighteen month old toddlers need more complex manipulative toys and more challenging large-muscle equipment. Mrs. Swan gives some practical suggestions for making simple puzzles, sorting boards, push-pull toys and a unique push through tunnel toy. In the chapter for ages two to three months she suggests that the advantage of a homemade crib-gym over a store bought one is its versatility. If your baby tires of the objects which you have hung on the gym, you can change them as the need arises. The crib-gym is easy to make, using either a clothesline and a cardboard tube, or a dowel and cord.

Throughout the book, Mrs. Swan provides specific directions and easy to follow diagrams for the toys, making them simple enough for even the novice toy builder. Directions are given for making many toys of cardboard, with alternate directions for the ambitious person who wants to make them out of wood.

The book has directions for creating texture balls, a delightful leather lizard, a gear board, cloth books, a shape sorting box, nesting boxes, soft blocks and push toys. The author offers additional suggestions on how to set up a play area for your child, activities that will keep your child interested and happy in the kitchen while mother is busy, and even interesting suggestions for things to do on a rainy day.

The book is written in a very conversational tone and you often feel that you are sitting across the kitchen table from each other while she offers her simple, practical suggestions.

The book is delightful, making the thought of do-it-yourself baby toys exciting and worthwhile. Elmer's Glue, cardboard, and Aunt Sarah's old skirt — here I come!

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Don't hesitate to confide your feelings concerning private matter. It's not nearly as late as you may think, Ari. Before week is complete, your personal world warms considerably. How nice.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Problem is presented which has no easy solution. Time is your ally, Taurus. Start using that great untapped resource under your hat. Week ends on key of A for angst.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): One who is less intellectually inclined may have the solution to one of your very personal problems. Intellect isn't all, dear Gem, and quite frankly, aren't you glad?

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Mood changes highlighted. You run the gamut from sheer euphoria to the bad, broody blues. In spite of the lilacs, April is still the cruelest month of all. Old longings return along with half-forgotten memories. Week ends with a sigh.

LEO (July 23-August 22): Action is followed by change. Use your bean, Leo, and change can be of positive nature. If local pinhead tries your patience, put on your headphones and tune him out. Week ends on key of A, for All That Jazz.

VIRGO (August 23-September 22): To better understand current situation, Virgo, you must be willing to face reality. Often it is easier to swallow blatant lie than trust your own common sense. Don't take easy route. Dig for data.

LIBRA (September 23-October 22): Personal puzzle needs attention. One who can help has already posted sign (with little arrows) toward possible solution. Read and heed. Week closes on key of D, for do, dial, and daffodil.

SCORPIO (October 23-November 21): Truth presents itself in unusual fashion. Rather than intellectual truth, look instead for spiritual or perhaps psychic truth which cannot be explained in routine way. Believe in your tomorrows, Scorp. Week ends on happy note.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22-December 21): Problem may arise with one who sashays about under the sign of Scorpio. If not careful, you enter emotional labyrinth unwittingly. Hold off on long-term commitments at this time. On last day kick off your sneakers and tiptoe through the tulips.

CAPRICORN (December 22-January 19): Push-pull week ahead, Cap. One who covets must be watched. To protect that which you hold most dear you may have to build a fence of pointed little warnings. Week ends with a holler.

AQUARIUS (January 20-February 18): Power, sanity and checkbook all hang in the balance you must maintain. Aries is in picture. Bash out overdue letters, reports, checks. On last day, Aquari my love, curl up with a good book. Or whatever.

PISCES (February 19-March 20): You and Sweetie have things to say to each other and you couldn't ask for a better week to get dialogue going. If you give a hoot, Pisces, lover will give a holler. And then some.

On chess

BEGINNER'S CORNER — Hint and explanation: Find the target and contrive to attack it.

Bobby Fischer's reluctance to play competitive chess has caused repeated speculation about his motivations. In a 1975 interview, Danish grandmaster Bent Larsen asserted to me that Fischer would not play again — the pressure of match was more than he could bear.

Svetozar Gligoric, the Yugoslav grandmaster, who is a close friend of Fischer, sees a sensitivity to the attitudes of others as the main factor. He fears the embarrassment of losing.

Robert Byrne, grandmaster and New York Times chess columnist, publicly stated that Fischer is afraid. Yet Fischer's unauthorized biographer Frank Brady stoutly defended Fischer's courage in a letter published in the Times. And former World Champion Dr. Max Euwe has described Fischer to me as the "greatest fighter at the chessboard" among contemporary players.

Hilda Browne, the mother of U.S. Champion Walter Browne, reports a conversation which took place shortly before Reykjavik-1972.

Ms. Browne: "Oh, Bobby, you've got to go. You simply must go to Reykjavik and beat Spassky."

Fischer: "Do you really think I can win?"

Ms. Browne: "You have to be kidding. There's absolutely no question but that you can win."

The reaction of Ms. Browne: "I was flabbergasted, I had expected he would be exuberant and full of confidence."

The position in SOLVE-IT is similar to once that Ewim Geller once defended (also with the black pieces) against Bobby Fischer. Though Geller's king seems vulnerable, Ligterink could only flail wildly, and like Fischer was the player soon to succumb.
